

Guerrillas advancing on Rhodesia

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (AP) — Black guerrillas fighting Rhodesia's white minority government have penetrated to within 32 miles of Salisbury, their deepest thrust yet, informed sources said Thursday.

Two of the guerrillas were shot and an African tribeswoman was killed in the crossfire after the gang evaded military patrols and reached the nearby Mermaid's Pool resort this week, the sources said.

Military authorities have closed the three-year-old hotel there, a popular weekend retreat for people from the capital, but gave no official confirmation of guerrilla activity in the area.

Neither the state-owned radio and television stations nor the newspapers have reported the advance of nationalist guerrillas operating from bases in neighboring Mozambique.

Informed sources said, however, the latest attacks are the boldest in the three years since the guerrillas launched what they call a war of liberation. The strikes were seen as part of renewed offensives by the guerrillas following collapse of constitutional talks between leaders of Rhodesia's six million blacks and Prime Minister Ian Smith's government, controlled by the country's 274,000 whites.

Elsewhere in Rhodesia a group of lawyers and doctors have raised $150,000 for a campaign opened Thursday by white Rhodesians to end racial discrimination, which they say is the source of all the country's major problems.

In other African developments:

—Angolan authorities announced they have completed investigations against a group of white mercenaries — including three Americans, nine Britons and an Irishman — and will try them on June 8, the Yugoslav news agency Tanjug reported in a dispatch from Luanda. The alleged mercenaries were captured by the Soviet-backed Popular Movement during fighting with Western-backed factions for control of Angola.

—Cuba may have started reducing its troops stationed in Angola as much as a month ago, diplomatic sources in Zambia reported.

'Dramatic act' needed

Congressman calls on Hays to resign

BELMONT, Ohio (AP) — Rep. Wayne L. Hays, returning home after a scandal over his relationship with a woman staffer, indicated through a spokeswoman Thursday that he has no plans to resign from Congress.

Rep. Romano L. Mazzoli, D-Ky., in a speech on the floor of the House earlier in the day, said Hays should resign as a dramatic move to restore public esteem for Congress.

Elizabeth Ray ...
... pewter plate gift

Hays' press secretary, Carol Clawson, told reporters in Belmont that "based on my knowledge it's my opinion he has no intention to resign. He will stand and face the facts and will vindicate himself."

Mrs. Clawson said Hays agreed with the statement she issued in Washington in which she said "I am sure he is not going to resign."

The congressman and his wife of six weeks, Pat, arrived at Hays' Red Gate Farm house near this quiet eastern Ohio town about 6 p.m. after a six-hour drive from Washington.

He and his wife declined to speak to reporters.

Mazzoli said accusations from Elizabeth Ray, who says she was Hays' mistress and was kept on the government payroll solely to provide sexual favors, have become a symbol of the public's general opinion of widespread corruption among public officials.

"The only way I can see for the House to be relieved of this ignominy ... is to have a dramatic act."

"I believe the time has come for the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. Hays) to resign from his chairmanship and to resign from the House as well," Mazzoli said.

Mazzoli's speech was answered with moderate applause, mostly from Republicans, and a rebuttal from Rep. Martin A. Russo, D-Ill., who called the statement "horribly unjust."

Besides Mazzoli, some other House members also sought to curb the power and influence of the 65-year-old chairman of the House Administration Committee, who first denied, then admitted to having a "personal relationship" with Miss Ray.

House Majority Leader Thomas P. O'Neill said Thursday several congressmen told him privately they are afraid the controversy will taint their own re-election chances.

O'Neill said he would wait through a congressional recess until Tuesday, then talk to Hays about the possibility of resigning as chairman of the Democratic National Congressional Committee.

The committee raises political campaign funds and provides other help for Democratic House members' re-election campaigns.

O'Neill said he was not recommending resignation, but would let Hays know that some House members believe "is problems are having a direct impact on their own chances for re-election."

Meanwhile, other sources said an effort is also under way among some House Democrats to force Hays to relinquish his role as both head of the political committee and the House committee pending the outcome of two different investigations.

A tentative resolution has been drafted for a meeting of the House Democratic Caucus meeting June 16, the sources said.

Admissions up in state for drug abuse victims

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Admissions to state facilities for drug abuse treatment has nearly doubled from 1974 to 1975, according to Donald P. Howard, director of the Missouri Division of Alcoholism and Drug Abuse.

Howard said the number of persons treated last year was 2,632, a 45 per cent increase over the number of cases, 1,817, a year earlier.

"This increase comes just after a 39 per cent increase in 1974 over 1973," Howard added.

Russo, responding to Mazzoli's speech, said Mazzoli was placing the burden of proof on congressmen.

"It seems to me that by making those statements, he implies that all of us in the House of Representatives have mistresses on our payrolls or are misappropriating funds," Russo said.

He said by asking Hays to resign both his chairmanship of the House Administration Committee and his House seat, Mazzoli is implying "if an allegation is made against any member of this body, then that member is automatically presumed guilty and should resign for the good of the body."

Hays, also a Democrat, was en route to his office in St. Clairsville, Ohio, and was unavailable for comment on Mazzoli's speech. But a spokeswoman for Hays said, "I am sure he is not going to resign."

It was disclosed Thursday that the House Ethics Committee will meet next Wednesday to decide how to proceed on an investigation of Hays.

House sources said committee chairman John J. Flynt, D-Ga., feels he has no choice but to go ahead with a full inquiry.

Meanwhile, a federal grand jury began looking into possible violations of laws covering government fraud or converting tax funds to personal use in the Hays case.

Federal prosecutors have reportedly issued subpoenas for both witnesses and records.

On-site inspection

Atomic test pact signed

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford and Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev will sign an unprecedented agreement Friday to permit American inspection of some Russian nuclear testing sites.

The twin ceremonies here and in Moscow close out 18 months of complex negotiations to limit peaceful underground testing and clear the way for Senate ratification of a parallel treaty restricting weapons tests.

Neither power will be permitted to conduct underground nuclear explosions exceeding 150 kilotons — the equivalent of 150,000 tons of TNT. Also, for the first time, American and Russian observers will be on hand to check for violations.

Until now, the Russians have been steadfast in barring any inspection on Soviet soil. Under the agreement to be signed here by Ford and in Moscow by Brezhnev, the observers will be allowed to check only on tests designed for peaceful purposes.

Still, the accord, projected two years ago at the Moscow summit, is of major significance since it both establishes the precedent of foreign inspection and comes at a time of strain in U.S.-Soviet relations.

Negotiations are lagging in Geneva on an agreement to impose ceilings on the two superpowers' nuclear weapons arsenals and the two sides have exchanged sharp rhetoric over Africa and over compliance with arms and security accords.

While establishing the principle of on-site inspection, the treaty appears to have little practical meaning for the United States.

Years ago American scientists gave up the idea of experimenting with underground nuclear explosions as a means for changing the course of rivers or for mineral excavations.

But the Soviets remained interested in such projects.

Terms of the treaty permit that work to go forward, provided no blast exceeds 150 kilotons. A series of explosions may total up to 1,500 kilotons — provided they are spaced no more than 5 seconds apart.

The treaty actually was completed early last month. White House and State Department officials said that "technical reasons" caused the delay in the signing and denied that political considerations played any part.

Privately, administration sources said the signing was delayed after Ford's advisers told him it would be politically damaging to sign a treaty with the Russians just before the Michigan primary.

Syria agrees to extension

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — Syria has agreed to a new six-month extension of the United Nations peacekeeping force separating Syrian and Israeli armies on the Golan Heights, U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim announced Thursday.

After meeting with Syrian President Hafez Assad, Waldheim said Syria agreed to the extension without prior political conditions, unlike six months ago when it demanded and received a Security Council debate on the Arab-Israeli situation with the participation of the Palestine Liberation Organization — PLO.

Israel announced last week it would agree to a continuation of the mandate of the 1,194-man U.N. Disengagement Observer Force.

In Jerusalem, Finnish Gen. Ensio Siilasvuo, the force commander, met Foreign Minister Yigal Allon to inform Israel of Syria's decision. Israeli officials said there would be no comment until they had an official report.

The Security Council is scheduled to meet Friday to approve Waldheim's recommendation.

The U.N. force, made up of troops from Austria, Canada, Poland and Iran, was placed in the truce zone after a disengagement agreement negotiated in 1974 by Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger.

In other Mideast developments:

Arab League Secretary-General Mahmoud Riad in Cairo messaged Lebanese President Elias Sarkis calling for an urgent Arab conference to solve the Lebanese civil war. Previous attempts by the Arab league to mediate have failed.

"An urgent Arab action is needed to avoid any foreign military intervention and to evade any attempt to internationalize the crisis," Riad told newsmen in response to a question on the French government proposal to send a peacekeeping force to Lebanon.

Full Amtrak funding is encouraged

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Transportation Appropriations Subcommittee has recommended full funding for operations of the Amtrak passenger train system for another year.

If the subcommittee recommendation of $430 million to fund the nationalized train service is ultimately adopted, it would ensure continuation of Amtrak service on five lines in Missouri that had previously been threatened with termination.

The subcommittee recommendation, released by Sen. Thomas Eagleton, D-Mo., is more than $15 million above the House-approved amount and $52 million more than requested by President Ford. Under the Ford request, all five threatened passenger lines in the state would have been terminated, an Eagleton aide said.

Recover stolen car

CB 'good buddies' lend helping hand

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Clarence Thompson's good buddies out there in CB-land really came in handy.

Thompson's fellow CBers helped him recover his stolen car in a chase right out of a Keystone Kops movie.

Thompson has had a CB, or Citizen's Band radio, for about 18 months.

He woke up in his North Philadelphia home Wednesday morning, looked out the window, saw his car was missing and turned on his CB.

"I shouted to all my friends out that the car was stolen. I went on all 23 channels ... I thought the truckers might see it on the highway," Thompson, a carpenter, said.

"It's a 10-33," I was shouting. That means an emergency," he said. He broadcast the car's description.

Then he just sat back and listened while an informal posse of "101," "Grand Dog," "Big Chief," and "Prosecutor" tracked the thief down and ringed him in the car at an intersection.

Someone called the police, who arrested Wayne Johnson, 26, of Philadelphia and charged him with auto theft and stolen property.

Thompson said he'd never met any of his fellow citizens who took part in the chase.

But he said he wanted to offer "three's on you (handshakes)" to all his "good buddies."

Wilderness coalition formed in Missouri

In an effort to preserve parts of the state's forest land, a new organization, the Missouri Wilderness Coalition, has been formed.

The Conservation Federation of Missouri reports that the coalition grew out of a recent meeting at Montauk State Park near Salem, where more than 70 representatives of conservation groups in Missouri, Arkansas, Illinois, Tennessee and Oklahoma gathered to discuss the need for federal wilderness protection in the Ozark region.

Immediate goal of the coalition will be passage of the Missouri Wilderness Bill in Congress. That bill, introduced by Sens. Stuart Symington and Thomas Eagleton in the Senate and Rep. James Symington in the House, would set aside some 28,000 thousand acres for study as a National Wilderness Preservation system. Two other tracts, the Glades and Irish wilderness areas, would not be affected by this initial step, but would be possibly added later.

Some degree of urgency accompanies the formation of the Missouri Wilderness Coalition, since the U.S. Forest Service has announced its intention to begin clear cutting this fall in some of the proposed wilderness areas. The Forest Service seems adamant in its opposition to wilderness designations, having recently ignored written requests from both Sen. Eagleton and Gov. Christopher Bond to delay clearcuts in the proposed areas.

We find this kind of exploitive attitude hard to understand, especially in view of the fact that Missouri, with all of its natural beauty, does not have one single wilderness area.

Being an election year, we don't know how successful the Missouri Wilderness Coalition will be in getting quick action. But we applaud its formation, and urge every conservation-minded Missourian to get involved in this battle.

A word to the reader

Readers of this newspaper have no doubt noticed some variety in body type recently, with some type appearing darker and of a different appearance than other type on the same page.

All of this is the result of The Democrat-Capital's changeover to a new typesetting system. The newspaper is currently in the middle of this, with one foot in the new and the other still in the old way of doing things. Thus the mixture of type faces.

We are confident that the end result will be a more readable and attractive product. Please bear with us in the meantime.

Who stole Ford's momentum?

WASHINGTON — President Ford was going through his closet the other day. Mrs. Ford said, "Gerry, what on earth are you looking for?"

Buchwald

"My momentum. I saw it here last month, but it seems to be gone. You didn't send it out to the cleaners, did you?"

"I haven't touched it," Mrs. Ford said. "I'll check with the household staff."

Mrs. Ford went down to the White House kitchen where all the help were eating lunch. "Have any of you seen the President's momentum? It seems to have been misplaced."

The staff all shook their heads. The upstairs maid said, "No, ma'am. You told us never to touch the President's momentum — or his football helmet."

Mrs. Ford went back upstairs. "The staff says they haven't seen it. Are you sure you didn't loan it to anybody?"

The President thought hard. "I don't think so. I'll call Kissinger. Maybe he knows where I put it. ... Henry, this is the President. I hate to bother you with this, but you didn't take my momentum, did you? ... No, I'm not accusing you of anything. ... Henry, I believe in you. I trust you. ... Henry, will you stop shouting? ... Yes, it's gone. ... Why did I call you? ... Well, I just thought you might have picked it up by mistake because you thought it was yours. ... What do you mean you've lost your momentum, too? ... Where did you lose yours? Either at Helsinki or the Panama Canal? ...

"This is very strange. Somebody is going around stealing our momentums. I better get the FBI on this. ...

"Get me Clarence Kelley. ... Clarence, this is the President. I seem to have a problem. ... Someone has stolen my momentum for the presidential primaries. ... It was all wrapped up in a nice box with a big ribbon on it, and now it's gone. ...

Betty and I have looked everywhere for it. ... Could you send over some agents right away?"

A few hours later.

"Mr. President, we're from the FBI. We understand your momentum was stolen from you."

"Either stolen or lost."

"Who had access to it?"

"Let's see, there was Betty, the children, David Kennerly, Bo Callaway, Rogers Morton and my entire campaign staff."

"That's quite a few people. Do you have any reason to suspect any of them of wanting to take it away from you?"

"No, I don't. It only had sentimental value."

"Think hard, Mr. President. Did you take the momentum with you on any of your trips?"

"Let me see, I believe I took it to Texas with me when I was campaigning there. ... And that was the last time you saw it?"

By JACK ANDERSON with LES WHITTEN

WASHINGTON — The Army slipped a military promotion list past President Ford last year without telling him it was engineered by cantankerous old Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., as part of a personal vendetta.

The unwitting Ford let the dubious document go through even though three days earlier he had signed a legitimate promotion list and had ordered it sent to the Senate.

There is evidence that the President was the victim of some sleight-of-hand, involving fancy razor-blade work by the Army on presidential documents and an erased date on the promotion papers. Indeed, White House records may actually have been faked.

The Defense Department began an investigation of the bizarre case only to have it quietly quashed, say our sources. The Justice Department also started an investigation that has gotten nowhere.

Thurmond has a strong whip hand over both the Army and Justice, it's worth noting, as a power on the Senate committees that oversee the two departments.

The events that led to the document tampering began as an exercise in Pentagon politics. A brilliant young lieutenant colonel, Wilfred Ebel, became a leading contender to head the 100,000-strong Reserve Officers Association.

Stern old Strom, a past president of the association, looked upon it as his private preserve. He fully intended to install his own protege, a lackluster World War II crony, Maj. Gen. Milnor Roberts, as the new president.

But the 44-year-old Ebel had an awesome record, complete with medals and citations for "tremendous service" and "personal integrity." His name was also one of the 405 on a promotion list that had been drawn up by the Army's most respected officers. It had been approved by the Pentagon and, on Jan. 14, 1975, had been signed by President Ford. A Pentagon memo adds that Ford has "forwarded (it) to the Senate on 15 January 1975."

But a funny thing happened to Ebel's name on the way from the President's desk to Capitol Hill.

First, Ebel's rivals in the reserves, Thurmond and Roberts, got together for a little chat. Thurmond forthwith directed an aide to call the Army and request, as a classified Army document attests, that Ebel's "nomination... be held in abeyance."

The Thurmond aide, according to the document, made allegations of misconduct against Ebel. But the document adds, significantly, that it appeared Roberts "may have been the source" of the rumor mongering.

Although the President already had signed Ebel's promotion and had readied it for the Senate, the Army's irrepressible political boss, then-Secretary Howard "Bo" Callaway, suddenly tried to recall Ebel's nomination.

It appeared that Callaway was too late, that the nomination was out of his hands. Nevertheless, he had his special assistant, Col. Peter Kempf, write to the White House asking that Ebel's name be stricken.

Nowhere in this memo, which we have obtained from White House sources, does Callaway's office warn the President that the vengeful Strom was behind the eleventh-hour move.

Instead, Callaway simply sent Ford a new promotion list. Incredibly, Ebel's name had been cut out with a razor blade. Then the sheet had been Xeroxed to make it look like Ebel's name had never been on the list at all.

The razor-blade artistry aroused the suspicion of Army Adjutant General Verne Bowers, who questioned the action. According to classified testimony taken by the Army inspector general, "General Bowers expressed some reservations about removing the name from the promotion list. He wanted to make sure it was the Secretary of the Army that was directing this and not someone using his name."

Bowers withdrew his objections only after verifying that the orders had been issued by Callaway personally. The new list was then sent to the White House, which forwarded it to the Senate. But our investigation has raised still other questions about the case, with Watergate overtones.

For instance, the documents sent to the Senate are highly unorthodox. The final page of the new list is fine bond paper, with Gerald Ford's signature. But the sheets on top, one of which contains the Xerox sheet with Ebel's name razored out, are all Xerox paper. No other Army nomination papers are this mix of good bond and crude paper.

The possibility that Ford never actually signed the final promotion list but that his signature was simply attached to it is heightened by the fact that the bond-paper nominations are prepared in St. Louis on a special typewriter. It is difficult to see how a new last page could have been typed up in three days in St. Louis and sent to the White House.

If the last page had been prepared in St. Louis, why weren't the other pages also typed up, too? What appears to have happened, despite White House denials, is that the final page from the first list was used and the new list, excluding Ebel's name, was stapled on top. This would mean, according to Ebel's lawyer, former Pentagon Assistant General Counsel Frank Bartimo, that Ford never actually signed a list without Ebel's name on it.

Military spokesmen deny they quashed an investigation of the case. But they admit that Thurmond intervened with Callaway and that Callaway pulled back the list after the President signed it. This claims the Army, is perfectly legal. But the case has certain parallels to the famed Dreyfus tragedy, in which a young captain was driven from the French army.

The sea lamprey, an eel-like fish that sucks the blood of its victims, sometimes will fasten onto swimmers. Unlike leeches, however, lampreys apparently are repelled by warm-blooded animals and invariably let go. There is no record of a lamprey harming a human.

Conservative view

Buckley will run good race

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

NEW YORK — Half a dozen liberal Democrats have announced their hope of winning the Senate seat now held by Conservative Republican James L. Buckley. They are jumping on Gentleman Jim like so many squirrels on a hickory nut. They are likely to find him a very tough nut to crack.

Kilpatrick

Few persons would have believed this five or six years ago. Buckley won New York's Senate seat in 1970 when warring liberals split the opposition vote. It was Buckley's first bid for high office, and most observers thought it could well be his last; no such fluke was likely to recur. His seat was seen as an easy morsel, just right for Democratic munching.

Incredible as it may seem, in a state that ranks among the most liberal in the nation, Buckley now looks remarkably solid. His prospects are picking up. Part of this is owing to his character, part to his record, and part to his Democratic opposition.

The thing is, Buckley IS a gentleman. He speaks softly; he does not rave or rant; he rarely seeks publicity as such. If he has spoken a cutting word about a colleague, it does not come readily to mind. Of the nine freshmen who took their Senate seats in January, 1971, Buckley surely would win the title of "most respected." He is not only a gentleman; he is also a gentleman.

Few first-termers make much of a mark in the Senate. Virtually no minority first-termers ever makes a mark at all. As a conservative Republican in a liberal Democratic body, Buckley could easily have disappeared from view altogether. It hasn't worked out that way. His personal charm, his political philosophy and his quiet persistence have paid off in three pieces of legislation that can be recalled offhand.

Each of the three bills reflects Buckley's principled conservatism: He abhors the excessive power of the state, especially as that power tramples upon the privacy, the liberty and the property of the individual.

The Buckley School Records Act thus gives college students — and the parents of public school pupils as well — guaranteed access to the records maintained in their files. His bill prohibiting the Department of Transportation from requiring the pernicious "ignition interlock" was a splendid blow against smothering bureaucracy. And the Buckley Amendment affecting the Consumer Products Safety Commission gives the businessman some recourse against the costly errors and misjudgments of this agency.

Buckley is catching fire from some of his New York critics for his position on federal relief for New York City. He owes no apologies to anyone. When it was first proposed to put the city under control of a federal troika, Buckley balked; he later supported the Ford administration's program. Some of the city's radical lips profess to be outraged at his attitude. Many of the state's voters, by contrast, have nothing but praise for his restraint.

What of the opposition? Well, Bella Abzug announced last week. Ramsey Clark is in the field. The September primary also will see bids from City Council President Paul O'Dwyer, Assemblyman Andrew J. Stein, Utica's maverick Mayor Edward Hanna, and Abe Hirschfeld, a wealthy businessman. The sovereign State of New York, whatever its sins of omission or commission, has done nothing to deserve a Senator Hat or a Senator Noodle. Brassy Bell's ideas run mostly to gristle; and Clark's run mostly to fat.

It is widely reported that Daniel Patrick Moynihan, former ambassador to the United Nations, may enter the field. He is a bright-eyed and bushy-tailed fellow, and on paper his record looks good. But Moynihan often tends to scratch the wrong way, and his acerbic intellectuality could turn off the common man. "I'm a Hegelian," said Moynihan on a recent TV show. Let him sell that image in Brooklyn.

Buckley's only declared opposition within the GOP comes from Congressman Peter Peyser of the 23rd District (Westchester and the Bronx). Peyser has middling-fair liberal credentials, but not much else. If he stays in the race, Buckley should dispose of him easily. The Democrats presumably will choose the Hat, the Noodle, or the Hegelian. In this politically unpredictable year, little can be predicted with great certainty; but against any one of those three, Gentleman Jim is a pretty good pick.

Death Notices

Ernest L. Cramer

SMITHTON—Ernest Leo Cramer, 33, Route 1, died at Bothwell Hospital in Sedalia at 11:50 a. m. Wednesday.

He was born in Osage County, Mo., Dec. 14, 1892, son of the late Jacob and Caroline Ott Cramer. The family moved to Pettis County in 1906 and Mr. Cramer lived in his present home since 1914. On Oct. 11, 1930, he married Myrtle Grace Dedrick, who survives, of the home.

Before his retirement, Mr. Cramer engaged in farming. He was a member of the Smithton Methodist Church.

Also surviving are a son, Leo Cramer, 1309 East 20th, Sedalia; a brother, Albert Cramer, Route 1; a sister, Mrs. Gertrude Monsees, Route 4, Sedalia; two grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

Funeral services will be held at 3 p. m. Friday at the Ewing Funeral Home in Sedalia with the Rev. Farrie Cole Jr., officiating.

Pallbearers will be Marvin May, Vincent Rennison, Ernest May Jr., Lennie Semkin, Wray Schroeder and Ewing Gibson.

Burial will be in Memorial Park Cemetery, Sedalia.

Charles Thomas Carson

OTTERVILLE—Charles Thomas (Babe) Carson, 75, died Thursday at Boone County Hospital, Columbia.

Born Feb. 18, 1901, at Syracuse, he was the son of Henry Tillman and Sarah Griswald Carson. On April 15, 1939, he married Lula Frances Holman, who survives of the home.

He was a member of the Otterville Baptist Church. Formerly a blacksmith at Fortuna and Versailles, he moved to Otterville in 1952, where he operated a filling station and drove a school bus, before retiring in 1959.

Other survivors include one daughter, Mrs. Gary (Opal) Johnson, 2500 South Stewart, Sedalia; two grandchildren; one brother, Pete Carson, Marshall; two sisters, Mrs. Frances Johnson, Tipton; and Mrs. Rosa Rimel, Fortuna.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. Saturday at the church with the Rev. D. Catlett, assisted by the Rev. Mel Hodge, officiating.

Burial will be in the IOOF Cemetery here.

The family will receive friends from 7 to 9 p. m. Friday at the Painter-Woodard Funeral Home here.

Earl Knoles

TALLULA, Ill.—Earl Knoles, 56, formerly of Sedalia, died Wednesday night at his home here. He had been ill since last June.

He was born Sept. 21, 1919, at Springfield, Ill., son of Earl and Nellie Knoles. On Aug. 24, 1958, he married Lillian Seiz, who survives of the home here.

Mr. Knoles was a salesman for a feed company. He moved from Sedalia about two years ago.

Survivors include two children, Nancee and Trent Knoles, of the home; three step-children, Harold Seiz, Rushville, Ill.; Warren Seiz and Mrs. Danny (Ann) Perkins, both of Sedalia; three granddaughters and one step-grandson.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. Saturday at the Pleasant Plains Funeral Home, Pleasant Plains, Ill.

Burial will be in Indian Point Cemetery.

The family will receive friends from 7 to 9 p. m. Friday at the funeral home.

John Robert Chesser

MEMPHIS, Tenn.—John Robert Chesser, 57, Memphis, Tenn., a former Sedalian, died Sunday at the Veteran's Hospital here. Graveside services were conducted Wednesday in Eureka, Kan.

He was born Aug. 10, 1913, near Hughesville, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Chesser, 606 South Osage, who survive. He married Elsie Lee, who survives of the home here.

Mrs. Chesser was a manufacturer's representative prior to his retirement. He was a World War II veteran, a member of St. Luke's United Methodist Church here and was a Mason and a Shriner.

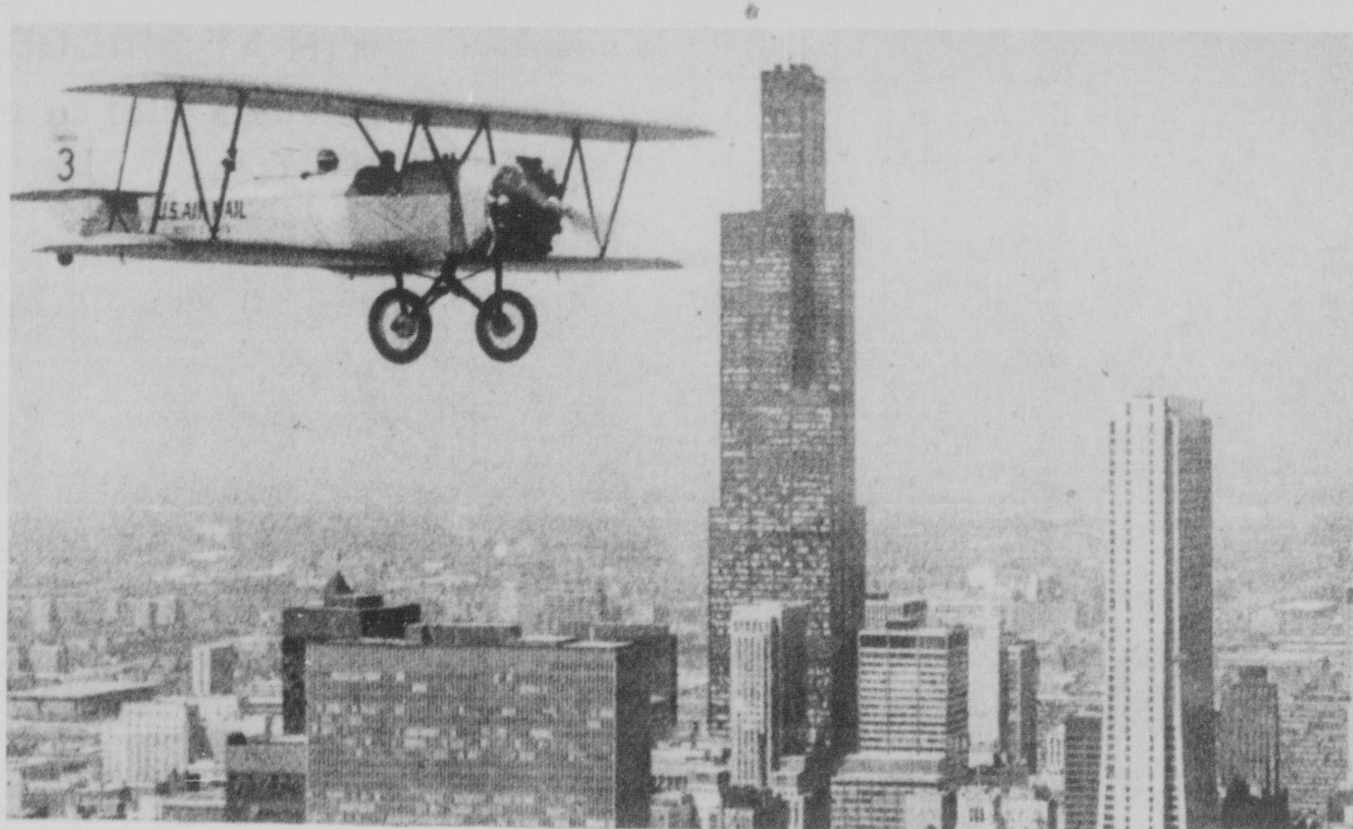

Other survivors include one daughter, Mrs. Cheryl Rice, Columbus, Ohio; one sister, Mrs. Mary L. Herndon, Wood River, Ill.; one brother, A. H. Chesser, Cleveland, Ohio; and one grandson.

Lorene S. Martin

Lorene S. Martin, 70, 1107 East 17th, died at 7 p. m. Thursday at Bothwell Hospital.

Survivors include her husband William A. Martin, of the home.

The body is at the Ewing Funeral Home. Arrangements are incomplete.

Big government undesirable?

WASHINGTON (AP) — Efforts to stop the explosive growth of government agencies probably will be doomed to failure no matter who is elected president, according to a study published Thursday by the Brookings Institution.

The study also questioned whether any good would result from efforts to streamline the federal bureaucracy, a step such hopefuls as President Ford, Ronald Reagan and Jimmy Carter have proposed.

"Attempting to cram the complexity and diversity of political institutions into a preconceived and rather arbitrary pattern of symmetry and simplicity and neatness, it could be argued, would do more violence to the system and generate more disorder than allowing it to establish its own untidy format," it said.

The Brookings Institution, which was founded in 1927, describes itself as a nonpartisan economic and political research organization.

The study, by Brookings economist Herbert Kaufman, said more executive branch agencies and units, 53, were created during the first term of President Nixon than in any other presidential term in the nation's history.

Another 23 were created in 1973, the first year of the second Nixon term. The numbers include agencies and units created by presidential order, by congressional legislation, by departmental orders and by government reorganization plans.

Kaufman analyzed 175 agencies that existed in 1923, and found that 148 of them — 85 per cent — were still functioning

50 years later in 1973. Only 27 had disappeared, while 246 new ones were created, for a 1973 total of 394, he said.

He did not include the Defense Department, defense agencies or the U. S. Postal Service in the study, in order to keep it manageable, he said.

Kaufman said that in many cases the names of agencies were changed, but not the agencies themselves.

He said in an interview that a major conclusion of his study is that the creation of agencies "is not necessarily linked to the partisan affiliation of an incumbent president or either, apparently, to his ideology."

"It seems that some presidents are borne along by a tide of events that generated a host of new organizations, and it was not simply their preference that gave rise to them," he added.

Kaufman warned that "explosive growth" of government agencies and units is "evidently approaching rapidly — if in fact they have not already arrived."

He said that agencies die reluctantly, once created, since they usually develop a protective bureaucracy and clientele, and often enjoy congressional protection.

Another factor that keeps agencies alive and prevents a return of their functions to the private sector, he said, is that "the public originally turned from the market place to government for certain services precisely because the market failed to provide them at an acceptable price when they were wanted."

Busch strike threatened by new problems

Wheeler campaigns; sets sights high

Waging another of what Democratic City Chairman George Breeze called, "his impossible campaigns," Kansas City Mayor Charles Wheeler brought his United States Senate bid to Sedalia Wednesday.

Breeze, a former Jackson County resident, said Wheeler has always been pegged as an underdog in politics because he has opposed machine candidates and often great odds.

Although Wheeler faces great odds in his bid for the Democratic nomination for Stuart Symington's Senate post, Wheeler claims to be optimistic.

He cited a familiar theme during his meeting with local reporters: the problems of labor leaders and government. He said "the rank and file members of labor" could support him. However, he feels that excesses of labor leaders could "lead the nation to bankruptcy."

Wheeler opposed a strike by Kansas City Fire Fighters last year. He said he feels "collective bargaining for public employes should be handled as a grievance procedure."

He said labor leaders "stand to gain the most by driving the cost of government up."

On that point he criticized former governor Warren Hearnes, also a candidate for the Senate.

"Hearnes big issue is holding government expense down, but that doesn't mean much when he relies on the support of labor to put him in the Senate."

He also criticized Congressman Jerry Litton as "a television personality candidate."

Wheeler, who will meet with President Gerald Ford Friday to discuss the proposed move of personnel and equipment from Richards-Gebaur Air Force Base from the Kansas City area, said the base would not be in danger if Missouri had a senator from its western side.

Wheeler maintained that he is a legitimate contender for the nomination, not just a one-issue candidate. Asked his view on a national health care program, Wheeler, who holds law and medical degrees, voiced opposition.

"No, I don't believe in a national health care program. I believe the Social Security system is in jeopardy," stated Wheeler. He said money for a national health program could be channeled into the Social Security system and into the search for cures to diseases.

Although he is a metropolitan mayor, Wheeler supports the present system of revenue sharing. Some mayors have suggested all revenue sharing funds should go directly to cities.

He said his original plan to seek his party's vice presidential nomination "went out the window" when he opposed the fire fighter's strike. He said labor leaders could not support him for national office after his strong stand.

Youngster escapes harm in accident

Two-year-old Melissa M. Brooks, daughter of Barbara Ann Brooks, 1203 West Ninth, escaped injury about 7 a. m. Thursday morning when the car in which she was sitting rolled across the street, struck a utility pole and fell into an eight-foot-deep drainage ditch.

Mrs. Brooks told police she left her daughter in the car while she went into the house for a minute. The girl apparently placed the car into gear, allowing it to roll across the street and into the ditch just west of South Park on Ninth.

Authorities reported the car, a 1976 Oldsmobile, was heavily damaged in the incident.

Nuclear treaty signed

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford and Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev today signed a precedent-setting treaty that will open some Russian nuclear test sites to American inspectors for the first time.

The simultaneous ceremonies here and in Moscow followed 18 months of complex negotiations and a delay in signing that some thought was politically inspired. It may, according to U.S. officials, spur negotiations in Geneva to reach a long-delayed agreement limiting strategic nuclear weapons.

Ford said the treaty "demonstrates that our two countries can soberly negotiate responsible and beneficial agreements despite the difficulty of the challenge."

Negotiators in Moscow completed work on the treaty in early April and it was initiated on May 12. However the signings were delayed.

Some administration officials privately suggested that Ford wanted to wait until after the Michigan primary before signing the treaty. But the administration said "technical reasons" caused the delay.

With Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger and Soviet Ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin standing alongside the President during the ceremony, Ford said the treaty would "contribute significantly to lasting peace and better relations among all nations."

Terms of the five-year treaty permit American inspectors to visit sites when the Russians conduct certain underground blasts that have potential use for changing the levels of rivers or excavating for minerals.

Years ago, American scientists abandoned the idea of experimenting with underground nuclear explosions for those purposes.

Nursing facility bids above estimated costs

The Pettis County Court opened bids Friday morning for construction of the Pettis County Nursing Service facility, first proposed in March, 1974, and the lowest bid was nearly $14,000 over estimated construction costs.

Tempel-Callison Co. submitted the lowest bid, $78,756, followed by Markely Construction Co., $82,400, and Borchers and Heimsoth Construction Co., $87,700.

Also present Friday morning were Roger Garlich, local advisory council chairman for the project; Bothwell Hospital administrator Don Feeback, and Dan R. Eckles, architect, and G. W. Stansbury, accountant, both with the State Bureau of Health Facilities Planning and Construction.

The previous estimate on construction of the facility was nearly $65,000. Total cost of the project was last estimated at $83,350, which included construction, architect's fees and equipment.

Construction of the 2,700-square-foot metal building will be 50 per cent funded by federal Hill-Burton monies, if the contract is signed before July 1, Garlich explained. The final encumbrance date is June 30, he said, on $39,825 of the total.

The advisory council for the nursing center has planned a meeting for Tuesday night to determine whether the additional $14,000 can be raised locally for the project, Garlich said. If not and the contract has not been signed before July 1, a new application would have to be made next year for matching funds to finance the project.

In April, 1974, the County Court pledged $20,000 to the project and the city agreed to donate $10,000 in addition to the land, valued at $10,000. Over $3,000 in private donations had been collected by last August.

The proposal calls for the building to be located on the northwest corner of 15th and Thompson. The land, already rezoned for the building, will be leased from the city to the county on a 50-year lease agreement. It was felt the long-term agreement would be

Dissidents detail Teamster abuses

WASHINGTON (AP) — A small group of union dissidents is charging widespread corruption among Teamster union officials, saying they make six-figure salaries, use a fleet of private jets and dine on French cuisine prepared by chefs on the union payroll.

The Professional Drivers Council, known as PROD, charged that the Teamsters is run by "money-hungry and power-hungry" executives lavishly lining their pockets at the expense of the rank-and-file. The council pledged to mount a campaign to force government action if the union refuses to "clean its own house."

The 2,000-member group, representing a handful of the union's 2.3 million members, documented its charges in a 177-page book showing that Teamsters President Frank E. Fitzsimmons and numerous other union leaders collect six-figure salaries, have unlimited expense accounts, receive expensive gifts and arrange for their own lucrative pensions.

Arthur Fox, an attorney who serves as PROD's staff director, told a news conference Thursday his organization found wholesale violations of federal labor laws during a 10-month investigation of union financial records filed with the Labor Department.

Teamsters officials declined comment. While many of the charges in its report were not new, the group presented for the first time in a single document a broad picture of Teamsters officials allegedly abusing their power.

The report noted that on the union headquarters' payrolls are a barber, a physical fitness expert, two French chefs and at least one chauffeur. It added that by way of contrast, the union's entire safety department consists of only two men who are paid about what the two cooks receive.

Litton to address graduates tonight

U. S. Congressman Jerry Litton (D-Chillicothe) will address over 300 graduates of Smith-Cotton High School at 8 o'clock this evening during commencement exercises at Jennie Jaynes Stadium.

In case of inclement weather, the ceremonies will be held in the Smith-Cotton gymnasium.

(Please see TAX, Page 4)

In addition to high salaries from multiple union jobs — at least 17 officials earn more than $100,000 a year — PROD said at least six officials have unlimited expense accounts covering everything from "a bag of groceries to greens fees at La Costa," the union-financed country club in California.

PROD said several union executives financed new homes with union funds or received "magnificent gifts ranging from new Cadillacs to condominiums."

In addition, the group said, the officials have access to the union's $13-million fleet of executive jet aircraft, second in size only to that of General Motors; they give high-paying jobs to their relatives and punish or harass union members who fight them.

Sen. Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y., announced that he has asked the Senate Labor and Public Welfare Committee to investigate pension abuses alleged in the PROD report.

Copies of the report went to the Senate permanent investigations subcommittee, which last month began an inquiry of the Teamsters.

Governor to release junior college funds

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Gov. Christopher S. Bond said today he is releasing more than $550,000 in state funds for junior colleges which had previously been withheld from this year's appropriations.

"I'm glad that improved state revenues have allowed me to approve this badly needed payment to junior colleges," the governor said in a statement.

Figures released earlier this week by the state Division of Accounting showed that projected revenues from general state taxes should be $15 million greater than projected by Bond's budget officials last December.

Because of the bleak revenue projections as long as 18 months ago, Bond withheld three per cent of the general revenue appropriations from all state agency and program budgets for this year.

While he has now released the withheld amounts for both junior colleges and the public schools, the governor said Thursday he will not release any of the withheld funds to other state agencies, estimated at about $20 million, because they have already cut back so they could operate without the additional money.

Bond also said the final full payment to public schools of $115.5 million in state aid was made on time today. It had been announced earlier this month that the full amount would be paid despite earlier predictions by Bond that there would not be enough money available to pay the entire amount.

Federal judge blocks new food stamp rules

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal judge today temporarily blocked the Ford administration from initiating new regulations that would eventually remove more than 1.6 million families from the food stamp program.

U.S. District Judge Howard F. Corcoran stayed the regulations for 10 days. However, the stay will be extended until June 15 under an agreement worked out in the judge's chambers, Corcoran's clerk said.

The new regulations had been scheduled to go into effect next Tuesday. At the White House, Press Secretary

Ron Nessen said "the administration is disappointed" by the judge's actions and is "determined to seek a reversal of this decision."

He said the Justice Department would be asked to "pursue very vigorously their efforts in the courts to implement" the regulations, which are administered by the Agriculture Department in its operation of the food stamp program.

U.S. District Judge John H. Pratt will hear arguments June 15 on whether he should issue a preliminary injunction against the regulations until legal and constitutional issues raised by groups opposing the new rules are resolved.

Congress heading off tax hike

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress is taking steps to head off a tax increase scheduled for July 1 that would cost a typical four-member American family earning $15,000 an extra $180 annually.

The Senate Finance Committee voted unanimously Thursday in favor of extending current tax cuts. The House has approved a similar bill.

If the antirecession tax cuts enacted last year are allowed to expire as scheduled on July 1, it would mean a $245 tax increase for a family of four earning $6,000 a year; a $204 hike for a couple earning $10,000, and a $151 increase for a single person with adjusted gross income of $10,000.

The Senate bill also has some bad news for wealthy investors and some good news for housewives and working parents.

Some of the provisions that have been used by investors to shield their incomes from taxation would be tightened, but not as much as by a bill passed by the House last year.

Working parents would be allowed a tax credit of up to $800 a year for certain childcare and household expenses necessary for both parents — or the sole parent — to work.

And for the first time, a housewife could qualify for tax-exempt treatment of contributions to a pension fund. This would be available only to persons whose spouses are not covered by a company retirement plan but who contribute to an Individual Retirement Account (IRA).

At a cost to the U.S. treasury of $40 million a year, the spouse's maximum IRA contribution of $1,500 a year could be increased to $2,000 for a joint retirement fund to cover husband and wife.

Extension of the tax cuts will allow current withholding rates from paychecks to continue. Here are the tax cuts that would be extended:

—Increases in the standard deduction, used by taxpayers who do not itemize, would be made permanent at a cost of $4.1 billion a year. The minimum is $1,700 for single persons and $2,100 for joint returns; the maximum is $2,400 for singles and $2,800 for joint returns.

—A $35 credit — which is subtracted directly from taxes owed — is provided for a taxpayer and each dependent at a cost of $9.6 billion. This would be extended through June 30, 1976, to allow the new Congress and the next president to gauge the economy before determining whether it should be renewed again.

As an alternative, a taxpayer could have a credit of 2 per cent of the first $9,000 of taxable income, or a maximum credit of $180.

—A "work bonus" for poor, working families with children would become permanent. Under this provision, costing $4.1 billion a year, a family is given a tax credit of up to 10 per cent of earned income up to $4,000. The benefit phases out at $8,000 income.

Also made permanent are reduced cor-

Military servants costing millions

WASHINGTON (AP) — The use of enlisted men as servants by high-ranking military officers such as Gen. Alexander M. Haig and George S. Brown is costing the American taxpayer between $3.6 million and $5.4 million a year, says Sen. William Proxmire.

Proxmire, D-Wis., listed the names of high-ranking officers who are supplied with a total of 363 enlisted servants.

The list showed that four-star generals like Haig, who is Supreme Allied Commander in Europe, and Brown, the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, have four "enlisted aides" assigned to them.

Lower ranking officers have fewer aides, ranging from three for Vice Adm. Noel A. Gayler, commander in chief Pacific, to one for Maj. Gen. Kenneth J. Houghton, who heads the Marine Corps Recruit Depot in San Diego.

Haig, former White House chief of staff under resigned President Richard M. Nixon, was the only officer not a member of the joint chiefs with four enlisted aides.

"Although they are called 'enlisted aides' by the services, they really are butlers, maids, dishwashers, drivers, bartenders and valets," Proxmire said. "All at public expense."

Proxmire said the number of military servants has been reduced to 363 from 1,722 when he first began his campaign against such use of enlisted personnel in 1972.

The list showed that all but a few officers used the maximum number of enlisted aides allotted to them.

Seven generals, who because of their rank are eligible to have one enlisted aide each, do not have any assigned to them, he said.

Proxmire noted military claims that high-ranking officers need aides because of their social obligations, but asked, "Why then does not the secretary of defense or any civilian in the Pentagon have a servant?"

He called another Pentagon argument, that the officers live in old base houses that need care, "equally absurd."

"The military brass should operate just like any other citizen when it comes to the luxuries of having servants," Proxmire said. "They should pay for them out of their own pockets and not with public funds."

The list showed that enlisted aides were serving high ranking officers in 32 states and 20 foreign countries or territories.

Religion in politics?

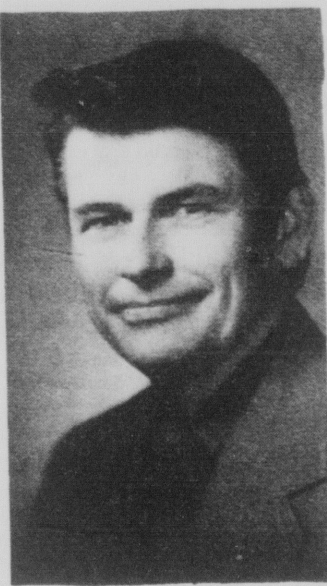

NEW YORK (AP) — Some political commentators, on the air and in print, are saying that religion has no place in politics. This is an old claim of some pietists who would restrict faith to the private sphere, but it's contrary to the teachings of the major historic churches.

It's also "non-Biblical and untheological," says the Rev. Dr. Donald Shriver, president of New York's Union Theological Seminary, the country's oldest interdenominational educational institution. "Biblical faith includes both dimensions, the personal and the social. This is way beyond debate in Christian thought today."

What brought the issue to the forefront is the emergence of religious elements in the race for the U.S. presidential nomination, with various political commentators saying it shouldn't be there, implying that the religious character of a man shouldn't count or be mentioned.

"A man's religion, or lack thereof, is his own business," writes historian-political analyst Arthur Schlesinger Jr., contending that "religion should stay out of politics."

Most complaints about it have been triggered by the candidly avowed Christian convictions of Democratic candidate Jimmy Carter, although other candidates also affirm their religious beliefs, albeit generally in less explicit terms.

Included

The Rev. Dr. Donald Shriver, president of New York's Union Theological Seminary, notes that some commentators are saying that religion has no place in politics. Shriver, however, says that claim is contrary to teachings of the major historic churches and also "non-Biblical and untheological."

(AP Wirephoto)

"It's almost as if a politician merely mentions the name of God, it's some kind of heresy," observes Dr. Shriver, a Presbyterian and specialist in Christian ethics. "But many people are interested in knowing the religious convictions of national leaders. It's a basic, motivating influence."

Since Carter, a Southern Baptist, cites the late great Lutheran theologian Reinhold Niebuhr as his favorite theologian, Schlesinger says this is reassuring because Niebuhr insisted that simple "pietistic moralism" could not solve complex social problems, quoting Niebuhr as saying:

"American Christianity tends to be irrelevant to the problems of justice because it persists in presenting the law of love as a simple solution for every moral problem... Christian moralism has made meager contributions to the issues of justice in modern society."

"This, however, is precisely the lapse in Christian functioning early in this century that Niebuhr so scathingly assailed. It's the very pietism that he attacked," says Dr. Shriver.

Both as a pastor in Detroit's early labor struggles and in his subsequent years of teaching and writing, Niebuhr stressed that Biblical faith involved more than simple private "moralisms," and had relevance to the whole of life, social and political.

To Niebuhr, the great "danger to the church was its failure to involve itself in the contentious issues of American common life, writes Dr. Stone. "He spent his life trying to find ways to articulate the relevance of the Gospel to American social problems."

No partisanship for Graham

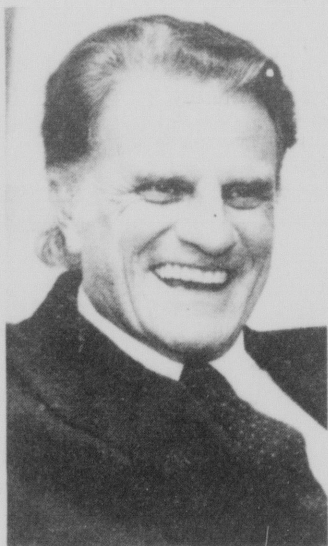

NEW YORK (AP) — Although evangelist Billy Graham is carefully steering clear of any partisanship in the presidential nomination race, he says it's a refreshing thing to have candidates talk about their devotion to God, especially if they back it up with their lives.

"We need to know what political leaders believe religiously, morally and sociologically," he said in an interview. "His beliefs and philosophy are going to be a determining factor in many of the great decisions a president has to make."

Graham said the religious convictions of candidates too often are obscured, denying people the right to evaluate that part of a candidate's character. "Many Christian politicians have been afraid to bring it out for fear of being accused of using religion," he observed.

He added that to do that is falsely manipulative but that honest commitment to religious standards and ideals, backed by conduct, is a gauge of a person's values.

He said that in America's present atmosphere of "moral decline," compounded by revelations of government and business scandals, many people ple may vote their moral and religious convictions above any other issue.

The evangelist said evangelical Christians stress adherence to traditional Christian doctrine and the need to experience conversion to it. Graham singled out three contenders for the presidential office as espousing evangelical views: President Ford, Ronald Reagan and Jimmy Carter.

"All of them claim to be evangelical Christians," Graham said. "Jimmy Carter is a little more expressive of it than the others, but the others also have identified with the evangelical wing of the churches. All three talk almost alike of their Christian faith."

Graham said he has "prayed with all three of them" on various occasions.

Reagan, a member of the Christian Church (Disciples of Christ), attends an evangelically oriented Presbyterian church in Los Angeles. Ford, an Episcopalian, takes part in various evangelical prayer gatherings in Washington. Carter is a Southern Baptist, a generally evangelical body.

Graham, 57, was on a stopover here on his way to appearances in Great Britain after a week-long crusade in Seattle, where attendance totalled 430,000, a record in that region, with 18,000 "commitments to Christ."

While applauding the new openness about religion in the campaign, he said it should "absolutely not" involve any appeals along sectarian lines. "That would be very detrimental to America and to the church," he said.

However, he said that bringing out clearly the religious positions of candidates was a relevant facet of full information about them and in no way transgressed the U.S. constitutional separation of church and state.

That policy means "freedom of religion, not freedom from it," he said, noting that the Constitution also guarantees freedom of speech, assembly and press, all processes separate from government but which have a part in evaluating candidates.

Graham, a Southern Baptist, whose long-time relationships with presidents sometimes have brought criticism of him, said he himself is staying "totally out of any partisan position" in the present campaign.

HOBO

I don't live by no man's law
I don't bear no coat of arms
I'd like you as my friend I'm sure
But I won't win you by my charms
I've sinned, I admit it here and now
And often did repent
I've went to my Confessor
With every good intent
I have no code of ethics
As doctors and nurses do
I live by the Ten Commandments
As close as any of you
No, I'm not a saint, my friends,
Nor neither do I pretend
For you see this flesh is very weak
And the twig will always bend
I'm no better than you are my friend
Nor you no better than I
Your color has nothing to do with life
And I'll tell you the reason why
God put us all on this Earth
With our own free thinking will
Some of us are good, some are bad,
Some even decide to kill
I just want to live by the side of the road
Until God calls me to die
And be a friend to people, "all people,"
As good, and as bad as I
My people of all race, color or creed
I'm willing to help you any time
No matter who you are or what you've done
I don't really mind
For you see, I was made whole again
And there is nothing I couldn't do
To help people of all races or creed
For I got my life back by people like you
Now I'm on my road to penance,
And I hope I never fail
But if this should happen again
I'll need help from you all.

Soviet clergymen end visit to United States

NEW YORK (AP) — A delegation of high-ranking clergymen of the Soviet Union, including Jewish representatives for the first time as well as Christians, has ended a 10-day visit with U.S. religious leaders with mutual expressions of friendship and cooperation.

It "has opened new possibilities for further work together in the future," said Metropolitan Juvenaly of Moscow's Russian Orthodox Patriarchate, chairman of the nine-member delegation. It also included Roman Catholic, Baptist and Lutheran churchmen.

Rabbi Arthur Schneier of New York, president of the Appeal of Conscious Foundation, a U.S. interfaith group working for religious freedom around the world and sponsor of the visit, said in a joint statement with Metropolitan Juvenaly: "We have taken a major step in interreligious cooperation."

Continued exchanges can serve as a "spiritual bridge" between the two parts of the world, they said. The foundation is seeking to arrange theological study in this country by religious students from the Soviet Union.

No dull moments at Baptist church

NASHVILLE (AP) — In the past four years, buildings of the Woodmont Baptist church here have twice been struck by lightning, suffered $400,000 damage in a major fire in 1974, and the choir room was looted during a recent worship service.

FREEDOM SHIP

"Here is another excerpt demonstrating the guiding force that directed Columbus to a barren land that was destined to become the United States of America."

"It was the Lord who put into my mind (I could feel His hand upon me) to sail from here to the Indies. All who heard of my project rejected it with laughter, ridiculing me. There is no question that the inspiration was from the Holy Spirit, because He comforted me with rays of marvelous illumination from the Holy Scriptures...encouraging me continually to press forward; and without ceasing for a moment, they now encourage me to make haste."

Burial will be in Indian Point Cemetery there.

MU curators to consider fees, budget

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — The University of Missouri curators scheduled a meeting in Columbia today to consider recommendations for an increase in student fees and a fiscal 1976-77 operating budget of $206.3 million.

The recommendations were made Thursday by their finance committee. John Hall Dalton, president of the curators, said there was a possibility they would appoint an interim university president.

A. G. Unclesbay, vice president for university administration, has been acting president since the resignation last Friday of C. Brice Ratchford.

If the finance committee's recommended student fees are approved, those for Missouri residents would increase $30 a semester to $300. The increase would amount to $90 a semester for nonresidents, whose tuition and fees would increase to $900 per semester.

The recommended operating budget provides for increases in salaries and wages of about four per cent a year for faculty and staff.

800,000 homeless

MANILA, The Philippines (AP) — Red Cross officials and Philippine police reported 185 persons killed and 800,000 homeless today after nine days of rain, wind and floods unleashed by Typhoon Olga.

Sun broke through on floodravaged central Luzon for the first time since rain began, showing what the Red Cross called "the extent of human suffering and destruction" caused by the typhoon.

President Ferdinand E. Marcos was among those making aerial surveys of the area.

The Red Cross listed 175 dead. The Philippine news agency, quoting local police, reported 10 more persons, all students, were buried alive by a landslide in Nueva Vizcaya Province, bringing the total reported dead to 185.

The widespread flooding hit 27 provinces and cities, including metropolitan Manila.

A total of 15 Smith-Cotton High School seniors were honored as being outstanding in their fields this week at the annual S-Club banquet held in the Smith-Cotton cafeteria.

Scott Gardner and Terri Martin were named the outstanding boy and girl. Miss Martin was also recognized as the athlete with the highest grades.

Other honorees were: Baseball, Kenny Miller; basketball, Kathy Anderson and Pete Fiene; track and field, Miss Anderson and Mike Riley; volleyball, Miss Anderson; soccer, Steve Wilcox; cross country, Victor Dabney; football, Bob Paul; golf, Mark Thomas; industrial arts, Riley; vocal music, Christy Clary; instrumental music, Marjorie Steen; drama, Krista Mucke; and speech-debate, Jim Swafford.

Also honored were recipients of S-Club awards at the group's first honors banquet 50 years ago.

A gentlemanly brawl

LONDON (AP) — One Tory charged at the Laborites with the ceremonial mace as members of House of Commons brawled with fists and insults after a one-vote Conservative loss.

The Laborites provoked the Conservatives by breaking into "The Red Flag," the anthem of British socialism, after winning a procedural vote 304-303 Thursday night. The motion blocked a Conservative maneuver to delay action on the Labor government's bill to nationalize the aerospace and ship-building industries.

The Conservative spokesman on industry, Michael Heseltine, grabbed the ornate, crown-topped mace symbolizing authority and swung it over his head as he rushed toward the Labor benches.

The historic hall ran with howls and jeers as other Conservatives grabbed Heseltine; Tory Nigel Lawson and Laborite Peter Snape swung at each other, and burly, 6-foot Andrew Faulds separated them.

More fistfights broke out. Less militant members broke them up and held on to members trying to join the fray.

The sergeant-at-arms was jostled as he elbowed through the melee.

"There have been scenes of grave disorder here tonight," said Speaker George Thomas as he adjourned the session.

Tax

porate taxes to benefit small business. The rate is 20 per cent on the first $25,000 of taxable income, 22 per cent on the next $25,000 and 48 per cent above $50,000.

Here are some other key provisions in the bill:

PRIVACY — Rules limiting White House, congressional and Justice Department access to tax returns would be strengthened. One provision could make news organizations liable to prosecution for receiving and printing private tax returns.

SHELTERS — Wealthy investors would find it less profitable to invest in oil-and-gas, movies, farming and other operations that provide quick deductions to offset regular income.

MINIMUM TAX — The minimum tax, designed to ensure that all wealthy persons pay some tax, would be strengthened. There still would be no assurance that some would not escape taxation.

GASOLINE TAX — A person could not deduct state and local gasoline taxes except to the extent they exceed $50.

HOME DEDUCTION — Many individuals now claim a deduction for a portion of the cost of maintaining a home on grounds they use it in their job. No deduction would be allowed unless the home is used regularly as a place of business or as a place where business is conducted with patients or customers.

SICK PAY — Current law exempts from taxes apportion of payments made by an employer to a sick worker. The bill would eliminate this and substitute a tax deduction of $100 a week for persons under 65 who retired with a permanent disability.

ENERGY — A family could save up to $225 in taxes by insulating the home, and up to $2,000 by installing a geothermal or solar-powered heating system. Similar tax breaks would be provided business.

RECYCLING — Companies that process recyclable metals, paper, textiles and glass would be allowed a tax credit.

BOYCOTT — Companies that cooperate with the Arab boycott of Israel and of American Jewish businessmen would be denied lucrative tax benefits.

BRIBES — A business transaction involving bribery of a foreign official would be denied tax benefits.

Car is stolen from jail lot

Authorities are investigating the Thursday evening theft of a 1976 Mercury Cougar from the south end of the parking lot in front of the Pettis County jail.

The car, owned by Jack Shelledy, Southwood Acres, was reportedly stolen between 5:30 and 6:15 p.m. while Shelledy's daughter, Carol, was apparently visiting someone in the jail. The keys were left under the seat of the car, police said.

Also missing were Miss Shelledy's purse, a coat and a tennis racket, police said.

Richard A. Jones, 715 East Ninth, reported vandals damaged his 1969 Pontiac at about 11:30 p.m. Wednesday, while it was parked at 14th and Lamine, according to police.

Damage was done to the auto's windshield, head lights, a parking light and the passenger side door. No cost estimate was available.

Williams to face murder charge here

Harold Williams Jr., 212 North Washington, was bound over to Circuit Court for trial on charges of second-degree murder following his preliminary hearing Thursday.

Williams is charged in connection with the March 21 fatal shooting of Melvin Gerald Anderson, 28, Kansas City, at the Anthony Buckner Apartments. Police reported an argument preceded the shooting incident. Anderson suffered a single .22 caliber gunshot wound to the head.

Benton County Magistrate Judge John Putnam, who heard Williams' preliminary after Judge Hazel Palmer was disqualified, also lowered Williams bond from $25,000 to $10,000. Williams remains in the county jail in lieu of bond.

Ellis Island restored as attraction

NEW YORK (AP) — In the early 1900s, 5,000 immigrants passed through Ellis Island each day on their way to new homes in the United States.

Over the years the immigration tide slowed, and the old entry center closed in 1954 when the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service moved its New York offices to Manhattan.

The 27-acre island in New York Harbor re-opened today with a dedication ceremony. On Saturday the first tourists will see the halls and screening rooms where 16 million immigrants were given the chance to become American citizens.

A $1 million appropriation by Congress during the nation's Bicentennial enabled the Park Service to start cleaning up the island.

For 22 years, the red brick buildings had gradually deteriorated, disturbed only by vandals anxious to steal and sell the copper wiring and brass pipe.

Tiles fell off the walls, plaster crumbled from the ceilings and birds and bats swooped through the hallways.

Work crews have cleared paths through the rubble inside the main building and installed wooden railings and walkways along the route the immigrants took. Portable generators have restored electricity, lighting the once-pitch-black stairwells. The old coal dock has been shored up to accommodate a 125-passenger tourist boat which will ferry sightseers from Liberty Island.

Until Oct. 30, 14 Park Service guides will conduct daily, hour-long tours through Ellis Island.

Unexpected cash pleases SFCC officials

An action taken by Gov. Christopher Bond Friday morning may mean between $8,000 and $9,000 in additional revenue for State Fair Community College here.

Bond said he was releasing more than $550,000 in state funds for junior colleges that had previously been withheld from this year's appropriations.

"I'm glad that improved state revenues have allowed me to approve this badly needed payment to junior colleges," Bond said.

SFCC President Fred Davis said the money was something "we had not expected" and was, therefore, pleasing to learn about.

Figures released earlier this week by the state Division of Accounting showed that projected revenues from general state taxes should be $15 million greater than projected by Bond's budget officials last December.

It was not immediately known how the money would be used by SFCC officials.

Kirkpatrick reiterates petition system revamp

By BOB FICK
Associated Press Writer

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Secretary of State James C. Kirkpatrick has reiterated his belief that the petition process in Missouri "must be revamped" so certification of signatures on petitions can be more easily accomplished.

Kirkpatrick said he would again push for adoption of legislation making certification easier for his office as he received 14 boxes of initiative petitions Thursday from the Citizens Committee for Conservation, which has proposed a constitutional change to increase funding for conservation in the state.

"This is becoming a serious matter," Kirkpatrick said when the petitions containing nearly 200,000 signatures were delivered for validation. The citizen's committee, which has been gathering signatures since last fall, is proposing a one-eighth cent sales tax for acquisition of new hunting and fishing areas. The tax would generate about $18 million annually and would cost individuals between $3 and $4 a year.

It is the second set of initiative petitions submitted to the secretary of state's office so far this year and five other petition drives are under way with backers claiming their petitions will be ready before the July 1 deadline.

Certification is nearly complete of 143,000 signatures on petitions calling for a constitutional amendment allowing state support to parochial schools in the areas of transportation, lending of textbooks and education of handicapped children.

While all signatures have yet to be checked, there are indications the petitions will contain the sufficient number to place the proposal before voters. An announcement is expected next week.

Four of the five petitions still being circulated would also amend the Constitution. They call for:

—Repeal of the sales tax on food and drugs beginning in 1978 at an estimated $140 million to $180 million loss in revenues to the state annually.

—Limitation of lawmakers' salaries to the present $8,400 a year with any future raises requiring approval of the voters.

—Prohibition of payment of any retirement benefits to lawmakers if the benefits are financed in any way with tax funds.

—Revision of the state court system in a more drastic fashion than a proposed revision plan already adopted by the legislature and set for submission to voters this fall.

The fifth petition drive proposes a new state law intended to curb soaring utility rates by limiting the expenses companies can use in calculating customer rates.

Under the Constitution, initiative petitions proposing constitutional changes require signatures of 8 per cent of the registered voters in each of seven of the state's 10 congressional districts. That is a minimum of 99,000 signatures. Petitions seeking changes in state law require signatures of 5 per cent of the registered voters in seven of the 10 congressional districts or a minimum of 62,000 signatures.

With as many as seven sets of petitions carrying a total of as many as one million names to be checked, Kirkpatrick said his office will be hard pressed to complete the process in the limited time available before either the primary or general elections.

Kirkpatrick said he would again propose legislation at the next session of the General Assembly to require signatures on petitions to be grouped by county so the process of certifying them will be easier.

But opponents of that measure and others, which have died in recent sessions, claim any changes made to improve administration of the initiative process will only serve to make it more difficult to mount a successful petition drive.

In addition to any successful initiative petitions drives, six proposed constitutional changes have already been authorized by the legislature for submission to voters. Although such proposals normally go on the November general election ballot, the governor has authority to either place them on the August primary ballot or call a special election for their consideration.

With the possibility of more than a dozen proposals to be submitted to voters this year, Kirkpatrick plans to ask Gov. Christopher S. Bond to advise him "as soon as possible" what proposals, if any, will be submitted in August. A spokesman said time is needed to meet the legal notification requirements for proposed constitutional revisions.

Since Missouri voters were given the power of initiative in 1908 proposed constitutional and statutory changes have been submitted to voters 48 times through the 1975 election. Nine of the constitutional revisions and two of the statutory changes were ultimately enacted, the latest two years ago when voters overwhelmingly approved new campaign financing law.

In both 1938 and 1940, five initiative measures were placed before voters, the largest number in the state's history, but since 1945, when the state's current constitutional provisions took effect, only three initiative drives have been successful. They include the campaign finance law proposal and a state law permitting branch banking and a constitutional amendment calling for the merger of St. Louis and St. Louis County, both of which were defeated.

Secrecy surrounds drug arrests

NEW YORK (AP) — Two men and a woman under indictment as top echelon international narcotics dealers were arrested Thursday at Kennedy Airport after they were flown here secretly from Argentina, where they had been hiding out.

Federal authorities said one of the three, Corsican-born Francois Chiappe, has links to the legendary "French Connection" pipeline through which narcotics flow from Europe to the United States via

South America.

Chiappe, 56, is under a death sentence in France for the murders of two drug procurers.

"These have been for years among the most important and most sought after criminal narcotics organizers in the world," said Peter Bensinger, administrator of the Drug Enforcement Administration in Washington.

Chiappe, with Miguel Russo, 41, an Italian, and Yolanda "Chola" Sarmiento, 45, a Chilean, were turned over to U.S. authorities in Buenos Aires Wednesday by the Argentine government. They were flown to New York on a non-stop jet flight chartered for the purpose by the DEA.

Chiappe had been living in a luxurious home in a resort town where he operated a toy store.

Chiappe, Russo and Mrs. Sarmiento were arraigned in federal court in Brooklyn. Bail was set at $2.5 million for each of the three. Chiappe and Russo were scheduled to be arraigned June 4. Mrs. Sarmiento's arraignment was set for June 7.

All three face up to 40 years in federal prison if convicted on various indictments outstanding against them in New York.

Officials went to considerable pains to insure secrecy. Even city police were not informed of the trio's arrival.

Authorities said Chiappe was a primary financier of a heroin operation in which Russo was said to have supervised the movement of the dope from Europe to South America to the United States by using a variety of couriers.

Mrs. Sarmiento was described as a chief New York distributor in a parallel operation, working from 1968 to 1973 out of a Brooklyn apartment across the street from the federal courthouse where she appeared with the others for arraignment. She jumped bail of $100,000 in 1971 and fled to Argentina.

An official Argentine government statement said the three had been expelled for activities "which might affect the social peace and public order and the moral patrimony of the nation."

It added without explanation that the trio had "exercised an option" to go to the U.S. to face the indictments against them.

Demand for cars, trucks exceeded expectations

NEW YORK (AP) — Almost nobody would have believed a year or two ago that, from an economic perspective, 1976 would be the year of the car. But it is; the car is driving the economy.

If the surveys are correct, evidence of this will be observed most everywhere on this Memorial Day weekend, at mountain and seashore and lake, in national parks and at ball parks, on highways and backroads and in traffic jams.

The car's comeback is truly astonishing. It has bucked the high price of gasoline, fears of new shortages, environmentalist antagonism, layoffs, dilution of personal income, and what had been an underlying fear of the future.

When Thomas Murphy, General Motors chairman, began talking many months ago about a strong year upcoming, some industry analysts openly questioned the reliability of his market information and also his analysis of it.

Disbelief sounded like an echo, from so many directions did it come. GM, it was said, was building cars to sit in inventory; Murphy was taking GM out on a limb; people won't buy cars because prices are too high.

But even Murphy has been forced to raise his estimates, as week after week the demand for cars, and for some trucks too, greatly exceeded expectations.

At the beginning of the year, he issued the most bullish forecast of any car maker: 10.25 million cars and 3 million trucks. Now he foresees "at least" 10.5 million cars being sold in the United States, and truck sales of more than 3 million.

If labor negotiations can be resolved "peacefully and responsibly without interruptions in production," he told the Detroit Economic Club, combined car-truck sales in 1976 could be the second highest in history.

Almost as noteworthy as the surge of car sales is the unexpected demand for large cars and the weaker-than anticipated interest in subcompact models.

The daily sales rate for mid-May was the second-best ever, topped only by the comparable period in 1973, but there was an important asterisk attached to the figures, released this week.

That is, General Motors, Chrysler and the Lincoln-Mercury division of Ford reported record high sales, but the overall figure was depressed a bit by the downturn at American Motors, which specializes in smaller cars.

Considering the near panic of a couple of years ago, Americans have adapted amazingly well to the gasoline situation. High prices seem to be accepted. And somehow, most drivers seem to have erased fears of shortages.

Banker charged in embezzlement

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A vice president of the Bucklin, Mo., State Bank has been charged with embezzling more than $15,000 from the bank in the northeastern part of the state, federal officials said.

In indictments returned by a federal grand jury here, Robert L. Schoeller of Bucklin is charged with embezzlement and making false entries netting $15,000 between 1972 and 1974.

Drivers picket brewery

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Striking beer truck drivers have set up pickets at the mammoth Anheuser-Busch brewery here, squelching hopes for a quick return to normalcy following the settlement of a three-month strike by bottlers at the brewery.

The drivers, members of Teamsters Local 133, struck St. Louis-area beer distributors May 2 in a dispute over grievance and arbitration procedures. Fourteen of the union's 450 members work at Anheuser-Busch.

The bottlers, members of Teamsters Local 1187, ratified a new three-year contract Thursday morning after the company compromised on an earlier demand that workers charged with violence on the picket lines be dismissed or suspended.

The two men who were to be dismissed accepted a voluntary one-year suspension, union officials said, and six other workers will be suspended for varying periods of time.

Parrot smuggling latest border problem

By HOLGER JENSEN
Associated Press Writer
LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — What do you say to a naked Mexican swimming across the Rio Grande while pulling a raft full of parrots?

Customs agents told him he was under arrest — one more in a recent rash of parrot smugglers.

"Found for pound there's more money in parrots than marijuana," says Senior Special Agent Duke Reeves of U.S. Customs.

Federal customs inspectors on the Mexican border are finding drunken parakeets concealed in car doors, under dashboards and even between the springs of rear seat back rests. Ingenious bird runners always have new hiding places.

Reeves says the birds are usually fed eye droppers full of whiskey, to keep them quiet (unlike humans, birds apparently aren't prone to singing while drunk), and carefully wrapped in stockings or other soft material to prevent feather damage during transportation.

A Scarlet Macaw that costs $150 south of the border brings $700 from American bird lovers. Double Yellowheads, Spectacled Amazons and Red-heads can be purchased for $12 to $25 in Mexico and sold for $175 to $350 on the U.S. pet market.

Customs' biggest bird haul was made in 1973 when agents arrested a couple in Fabens, Tex., who had a plane-load of 1,500 parrots valued at $177,000.

Most smugglers use cars and pickup trucks. Between October and December last year, customs men seized 677 parrots and arrested 22 smugglers at regular border crossing points in California and Texas.

The feathered contraband was either sniffed out by U.S. Customs dogs or given away by a telltale squawk from a hung-over parrot that woke up at the wrong time, while an inspector was examining the vehicle.

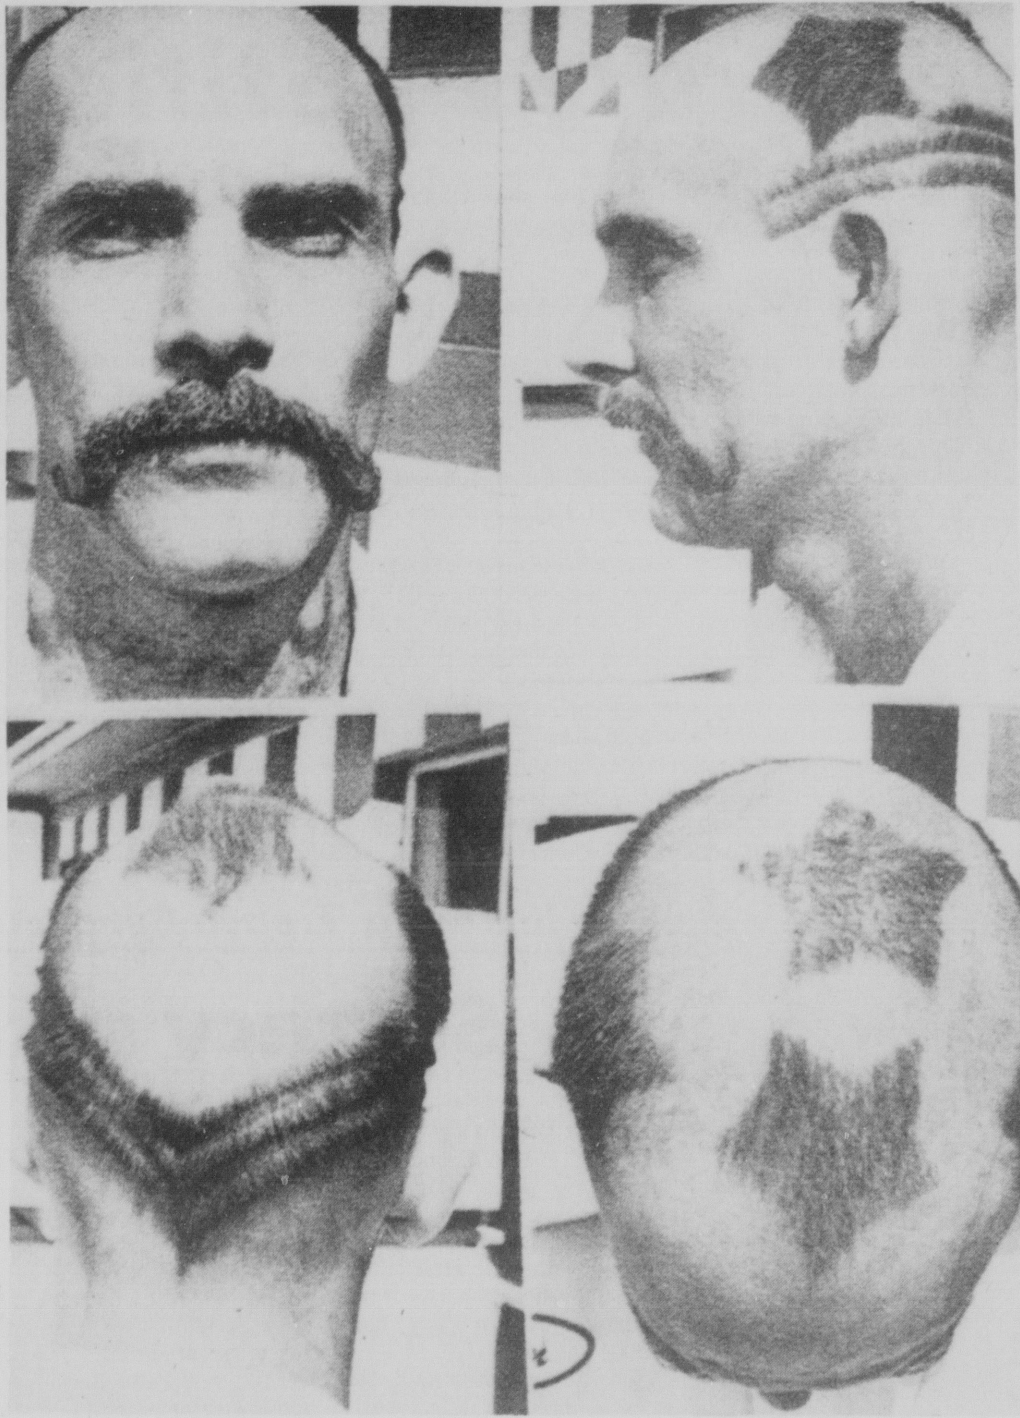

Big or small, each smuggling case is treated seriously by federal authorities. Parrots are no laughing matter to the nation's $6 billion poultry industry because they can carry Exotic Newcastle Disease, which has repeatedly devastated flocks in the Southwest since 1970.

Eight Southern California counties suffered the worst epidemic of Newcastle in 1972. It led to the destruction of 12 million chickens and turkeys in an emergency eradication program that cost U.S. taxpayers $52 million.

Parrots can also infect humans with psittacosis, or parrot fever. Young children and elderly people are particularly susceptible to its flu-like symptoms, which can sometimes be fatal.

"The only way for these diseases to enter the United States is through imported birds that avoid quarantine," says Dr. Ralph Holte of the state Agriculture Department. "One parrot is enough to start a disastrous epidemic."

Legally imported birds have to go through a one to three-month quarantine at stations licensed by the U.S. Department of Agriculture. It is an expensive process that accounts for the big price markup between point of origin and pet store.

Consumer eating ground bone bits

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some consumers probably have been getting finely ground bits of bones in their hot dogs for more than a year and haven't even realized it, Agriculture Department officials say.

The practice involves the use of machines which grind up neck bones, ribs and other hard-to-scrape bones from cattle and hog carcasses cut up by food processors. Under pressure, the mixture is forced through sieves which separate most of the bone from the squashed meat.

But finely ground bits of bone remain in the salvaged meat, which then is used to make hot dogs, pork sausage, canned beef stew, frozen pizzas and other products. Department experts say the bone bits cannot be detected when the food is eaten.

Federal permission to use mechanical de-boners nearly 18 months ago was made known Wednesday at the first of several Agriculture Department briefings to inform consumers about proposed rules that would officially approve mechanical de-boners. Those devices been used since late 1974 under informal department approval.

Officials said that food processors were notified then that they could use the machines. The notices were in the form of "administrative bulletins" sent to federal meat inspectors and food processors. A spokesman said there was no public announcement at the time.

But the spokesman added that "relatively few" processors have the new deboners and that most companies continue to use hand deboning.

Department officials say bits of bone might provide consumers with needed calcium in their diets. Up to one per cent calcium is allowed in mechanically de-boned meat. But since bone is not all calcium, considerably more than one per cent bone might be allowed.

According to the department, nearly one billion pounds of additional meat could be salvaged annually or nearly five pounds per American. Further sessions will be held in Sacramento, Calif., June 11; New York, June 23; and Chicago, July 8.

Officials said processors also will be allowed to use mechanical deboning while the formal proposal is considered over the next few months under "interim" regulations.

Magazine offers advice to disabled

SAN DIEGO (AP) — In the first issue of the magazine, Mainstream, a 25-year-old man with epilepsy offers tips about learning to live with the disease of the nervous system.

"Naturally, living under the threat of seizures is a strain," Greg Joiner wrote.

"The understandable ignorance and even prejudice of peers can cause great hardships for epileptics. This is why the difficulties they face are as much emotional as physical."

The managing editor of the magazine, Jim Hammit, has cerebral palsy. His staff of 20 is made up of physically disabled persons trying to give something to those they call the "able-disabled."

Hope is what Mainstream offers, if it goes over.

An editorial aim is helping the disabled get into regular programs of public schools instead of, says one writer, "just sticking them away."

With a $95,665 federal grant, the first issue came out on schedule in April. A second edition is scheduled.

The expenses are running about $9,500 a month — there is enough money to last 10 months — and it is expected to be two years before advertising and $5 subscriptions make Mainstream self-sufficient.

There is no assurance that the grant will be repeated by the Regional Employment and Training Consortium, set up by the U.S. Department of Labor under the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act of 1973.

Among the major costs are hourly wages paid to the staff and the $1,250 monthly salary of Frank McGovern, a former television newsman who is administrator of the project. The wages are $2.30 an hour for the first month, going up a dime an hour in every month thereafter.

Printing at the San Diego Daily Transcript plant costs $490 monthly, but the Mainstream staff does the work, setting copy on a rented photocomposing machine and then pasting up the results.

White, ethnic neighborhoods slowly dying out

CHICAGO (AP) — Henry Machocki says you couldn't pay him to stay in the Polish neighborhood where he grew up.

Machocki, 28 and just out of the service, was offered a five-room apartment for only $50 a month by an immigrant landlord in a near Northwest Side neighborhood, one that used to be called Chicago's Warsaw by the Poles who settled there.

"How could I pass it up?" says Machocki, one of eight children of immigrant parents. "I didn't want to live there. The neighborhood was dying."

Instead, he moved farther north, just a few blocks from Lake Michigan beaches where his new bride found a job as a bank teller while he studied for a master's degree at the Illinois Institute of Technology.

By itself, Machocki's decision means little. But in Chicago, New York and other large cities, it is a decision being made more and more often. And that, in simple terms, is why the urban white ethnic neighborhood — part of what President Ford recently called the nation's "ethnic treasure" and presidential aspirant Jimmy Carter called "ethnic purity" — is losing more and more of its character.

Next to New York, Chicago is perhaps the nation's biggest ethnic kettle, and academicians, sociologists and influential leaders in the city generally agree that the time of the traditional, white, European ethnic neighborhood is passing.

Immigration from Europe has slowed to a trickle. Children, when grown, have generally "moved up" and onward.

One expert, Msgr. Geno Baroni, president of the National Center for Urban Ethnic Studies, says that unless an energetic national neighborhood policy is pursued, the neighborhoods will die and the nation will "face a new era of American apartheid—cities that are black, brown and broke and ringed by hostile and isolated suburbs."

German, etc. — neighborhood still has a chance to survive in the cities, and, if impetus is provided by government, a new kind of neighborhood — culturally, ethnically and racially diverse — may be built.

Author now a 'two-bit celebrity'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Peter Benchley, author of "Jaws" and "The Deep," ordinarily displays a professorial calm but on his 24-hour visit to Hollywood he was nervous.

"I have to be on the Johnny Carson Show tonight," he explained. "I have a facility for television, but somehow the Carson show throws me. I have a recurring nightmare that I appear for the broadcast and Johnny isn't there. Don Rickles is."

Fortunately, Carson was in residence for Benchley's night, and the author returned to his Princeton, N.J., home with relief, his selling job accomplished. He is giving four days to the launching of "The Deep" for his publishers at Doubleday, and he indicated that is enough.

"Because of 'Jaws' I have become some kind of two-bit celebrity," he said deploringly. "It is insane for me to be chased down the streets of my own town, Princeton, simply because some kids want autographs."

Benchley is not your ordinary kind of successful novelist. He is, of course, the grandson of the famed humorist-comedian Robert Benchley, who died in 1945 when Peter was 5, and son of another noted writer, Nathaniel. And Peter didn't just pen an obscure first novel but one of the publishing phenomena of recent times.

The latest count for "Jaws": 200,000 hardcover, 9.2 million paperback. And then there's the movie.

All of this should have made Benchley a millionaire, on paper if not in reality. His own lifestyle has changed very little, he insisted. He still lives with his wife and two children in the college town, still devotes most of his days to facing a typewriter.

But the hoopla that has surrounded "Jaws," both in book and movie form, has changed people's attitudes toward him.

"The Deep," the story of a couple who encounter treasure and danger during a diving vacation in the Bahamas, has so far been well received by the critics, said the author. Doubleday is confident, having ordered a 150,000 first printing vs. 25,000 for "Jaws."

As with his first novel, Peter Benchley sold the film rights before publication. Peter Guber will produce for Columbia with Peter Yates directing.

Filming begins July 5 on — honest — Peter Island. Robert Shaw and Nick Nolte ("Rich Man, Poor Man") are starring.

The next book for Benchley? "I'm not sure yet. But Doubleday wants to get me out of the water."

Men's neckties contain a piece of thickening cloth inside that has a bias cut to the right. This makes it easier for righthanded men to tie their ties, but makes it harder for lefthanders to form a good knot.

Gunmen kill Moslem's sister

Murder hinders talks

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — President-elect Elias Sarkis' efforts to launch peace talks between Lebanon's warring Christians and Moslems have been set back by the murder of leftist Moslem leader Kamal Jumblatt's sister.

A band of gunmen burst into the apartment of Linda al-Atrash on Thursday in an area of Beirut controlled by the right-wing Christian Phalange party. A hail of bullets killed Mrs. al-Atrash, 35, and wounded her two daughters, police reported.

The daughters, Noha, 27, and Samar, 18, were reported in critical condition. A report Thursday from Jumblatt's office said Noha was dead, but the hospital said she was alive. Leaders of the Phalange party denied the killers were from their militia. Beirut Radio broadcast an appeal from Jumblatt to his followers for calm.

"Our brothers and colleagues must abide by the moral values we cherish even though others may not," he said. "My sister is a martyr to honor and confidence in others and belief in the possibility of coexistence in Lebanon."

Mrs. al-Atrash was separated from her husband. Like many Beirut residents, she had continued to live in an area controlled by forces of the other side.

Phalange militiamen delivered her body to the Moslem side of the city. Jumblatt, weeping, took it to Mokhtara, the family home in central Lebanon, for burial today.

The killing postponed for the second time a meeting between Jumblatt and Sarkis to discuss the Christian president-elect's effort to arrange an armistice in the civil war and a round-table political conference of the leaders of all the warring factions.

No increase in the fighting was reported despite fears of Moslem revenge for the killing of Mrs. al-Atrash. Officials estimated about 100 persons were killed Thursday in Beirut and the nearby mountains.

Stroke can bring personality change

Dear Dr. Lamb — My dad had a stroke five years ago when he was in his latter 40s, and he spent almost three months in the hospital. They said his stroke was caused by an aneurysm in his forehead. He had lost control of all of his faculties, but since then regained all of his physical capacity. He can walk, talk, eat, and in fact, I think he is physically stronger now than before.

His problem is mental. He has a very unreasonable, unfair attitude toward members of his family. He hasn't been able to hold a job since his stroke because he has lost his alertness and his peripheral vision, and it was thought unsafe for him to return to his old job. He is easily irritated and continually repeats false statements and is unbelievably rude at times.

He has seen a few doctors for therapy but he refuses to be helped because in his words, "there is nothing wrong with me. I am as healthy as I ever was in mind and body." Can you give us any help or guidelines? My mother has the patience of a saint, but she can't put up with him forever, acting this way.

Dear Reader — The part of the brain that controls our thinking, character and personality is separate from those parts that control our physical functions. It is not uncommon to have personality changes after brain damage, whether the damage is from a physical injury (as in boxers), or from a disease of the circulation such as a stroke. Individuals who previously were kind, thoughtful and considerate often become just the opposite.

We behave in relation to our various brain cells. If these cells are altered, our knowledge, thinking and behavior are different. When sufficient damage has occurred to alter a person's character or behavior, he is in fact a different person.

I wish that there were an immediate solution to offer you. Unfortunately, there is a limit to what can be done. Brain however, they will also find a pre-paid envelope addressed to the Division of Family Services in Jefferson City and an instruction card which explains the mailing procedure. They will put the signed authorization to purchase card and a cashier's check, bank draft or postal money order in the pre-paid envelope and put them in the mail. They should then receive their stamps within five working days.

Food stamp recipients, however, will continue to go to the local Family Services office to be certified to receive the stamps or to report changes in income or other circumstances. They should also call the Family Services office if they suspect the stamps have been lost in the mail.

In a related development, Mrs. Cramer reported several efforts are being made in order to reduce the number of ineligible persons receiving food stamps. Presently, she noted, an unemployed stamp recipient who has not secured work in his specialty by 30 days after being approved for stamps must accept employment outside his field if it is offered to him. Such work must pay the prevailing minimum wage. Efforts are now being made to enforce this regulation closer than has been the case in the past.

Another step in tightening eligibility requirements, which has not yet received final approval, calls for averaging an applicant's income for the three months prior to his application for stamps. Presently, only his income at the time the application is made is used to determine eligibility.

Mrs. Cramer said she felt these and other policies and proposals designed to curb food stamp abuse would not significantly reduce the number of Pettis County recipients "because we already conduct complete and thorough evaluations of prospective applicants before a decision is made... also, in a county the size of Pettis, we personally know most of the applicants. In bigger cities, it would be easier to secure stamps under false pretenses."

Currently, she said, 584 families, averaging four members per family, receive food stamps for an approximate total participation of 2,336 persons.

Court denies venue change for ex-official

JOPLIN, Mo. (AP) — Request for a change of venue has been refused for a former Jasper County public administrator charged with felonious stealing by embezzlement from two estates under her official care.

Judge Ben F. Pyle of the circuit court denied the state's motion Thursday, citing four legal technicalities, including the fact that it had not been signed by the defendant, Helen McRae.

Mrs. McRae resigned last month for personal reasons. She stated she wanted a change of venue because of pretrial publicity here. The prosecutor said he would rather prosecute the case during the June term of circuit court in Carthage.

An attorney for Mrs. McRae said she would refile the motion within 10 days.

Rubber workers leaders reject plan, end benefits

CHICAGO (AP) — United Rubber Workers leaders have rejected a plan to impose a special dues supplement on members that would allow continued payment of weekly benefit checks in the union's strike against four major rubber companies.

The action at a special convention of union leaders Thursday meant an end to $35 weekly benefit checks from the union's depleted strike fund, which contained $5 million when the walkout began a month ago.

Union President Peter Bommarito told the convention that the walkout would continue despite the loss of the benefit payments.

A dues supplement was favored by only a handful of delegates. Most of those from striking locals were opposed to such a move.

"There's no way in hell you're going to be able to justify a high supplement," said John Nardella of Akron, Ohio. "And yet what is a low supplement going to do?"

Union leaders said the 120,000 working members would have to pay nearly $100 a month in additional dues to continue the benefit payments to some 70,000 idled by the walkout against Firestone, Goodyear, Goodrich and Uniroyal. Of those, 61,000 are on strike and 9,000 have been laid off.

Ray Wiseman, a local union president from Woodburn, Ind., said his members are "in complete support of suspending the benefits to show these rubber companies we don't need these payments to win the strike."

But in the debate, it developed that two of those on the 18-member international executive board had dissented in the recommendation to reject the dues supplement.

Leo O'Rourke of Hamilton, Ont., one of those who favored a dues supplement, told the convention that "to come here and do nothing is not to give proper support to brothers on strike."

The voice vote on which the convention rejected the dues supplement was a strong one, though far from unanimous.

Bommarito said the convention was convened for the "express purpose of reviewing, analyzing and determining what, if any, type of financial program should be adopted by the membership with regard to the URW strike fund."

He said the aim was "not... to provide financial assistance to the membership on strike against the Big Four," but he said the rubber companies are "preparing to launch a broad-ranging publicity campaign shortly after our convention which will attempt to destroy our solidarity."

"They are hoping that their propaganda will collapse the morale of our striking Big Four membership and result in our capitulation to the companies' substandard offer," he said.

In the negotiations,

Firestone has offered a pay hike of $1.15 an hour over three years plus an unlimited cost-of-living adjustment that would be activated in the middle of the second year by a cumulative 7 per cent rise in inflation. The union wants the provision effective immediately on a lower inflation rate figured on a quarterly basis.

President can calm fires of bussing

AMHERST, Mass. — Of the 14,500 people at the University of Massachusetts commencement exercises here, more than half must have been from the Boston area.

Rowan

They talked a lot about the upsurge of violence they expect in South Boston this summer as passions flare anew over bussing.

"It will be the 13, 14, 15-year-olds," said a lawyer. "These kids feel they can beat, maim, destroy, without law enforcement authorities moving aggressively to punish them."

Some whites argued that court-ordered bussing had spawned the violence and hatred, pretending that racial bigotry had not existed in South Boston before Judge W. Arthur Garrity Jr. ordered bussing.

But a surprisingly larger number of whites were blaming President Ford and Atty. Gen. Edward Levi for fanning new emotions over bussing by raising phony hopes that through some Justice Department initiative they can get federal judges to stop ordering bussing.

How can anyone believe that a "nice guy" President would seek votes, however desperately needed to beat off Ronald Reagan's challenge, by exploiting bussing in a way that may lead to death and destruction in Boston, Louisville, Wilmington, Del., or elsewhere? Few people I talk to want to believe that.

Yet the deans, the teachers here kept noting that Mr. Ford never mentions bussing except in a condemning way that leads the anti-bussing demonstrators to believe, "The President is with us." People here were asking why Mr. Ford did not express moral outrage when young punks used the staff holding the U. S. flag to pummel a black passerby in Boston.

The problem, I think, is that President Ford has never read enough, or talked to enough people, about bussing to have the faintest idea what the legal and moral issues are.

Is it too late for someone to tell him that Judge Garrity is no tyrant who ordered bussing out of arrogance or spite? After hearing scores of hours of testimony and examining almost 1,000 documents, Judge Garrity made this finding of fact:

"The defendants (the Boston School Committee) have, with awareness of the racial segregation of Boston's neighborhoods, deliberately incorporated that segregation into the school system."

Someone must remind the President that on Dec. 19, 1974, the First Circuit Court of Appeals ruled unanimously: "It is beyond dispute that the defendants took every opportunity to maintain segregation where it existed and to foster segregation where it did not. In light of the ample factual precedents in the Supreme Court, we do not see how the court could arrive at any other conclusion."

The legal findings are so clear that it is hard for me to understand why Atty. Gen. Edward Levi has inserted himself into the act by way of raising a national furor.

The issue before Mr. Ford is fundamentally moral. The constitutional violations in Boston are manifest. Does the President choose to undercut the courts by asserting that they had no right to interpret the Constitution the way they did? Will he say the courts are right but he doesn't think it smart for the courts to do anything about it? Is he saying that because bussing is a legitimate but divisive tool, he will offer the nation a new, healing formula to produce the integration in Boston that the school committee has resisted so persistently, angrily, defiantly?

I wish this country did not need to bus any of the 21 million children who are being transported to public schools (less than a fifth of them for racial reasons). I wish this society were as beautifully integrated as it could be if decency were to prevail, then neighborhood schools would not carry the taint of racism. It surely is no great favor to black kids to bus them into South Boston to a high school that was sending about one white graduate in 25 on to college.

But what does a nation built on law do when its Constitution has been violated systematically? Shrug it off with a "To hell with the Constitution"? Declare the mob king?

Any way I look at the bussing situation, I come up convinced that this is a matter that President Ford might better have left alone.

The new technology arrives

By DOUG KNEIBERT

There is a French saying that the only constant is change. Well, change has come to where I work in a big way.

First, a little background. Among the many revolutions going on in this country today, one has been occurring for the last few years in the newspaper industry. It is perhaps the third great advance in the history of printing, the first two being Gutenberg's invention of movable type around 1450, and Mergenthaler's development of the linotype machine in 1886.

The present revolution, now well underway, involves not only photocomposition of type, but a new way of getting that type on paper. Up to fairly recently, that step was always a twofold one: the reporter wrote his story on a typewriter, then someone "reset" that story to turn it into print, either by hand-setting type, operating a linotype machine or punching out a perforated tape to feed through a typesetting machine.

Now the name of the game is "capturing the first keystroke." This means that the story is typed only once by the reporter originally. The story is then "called up" on a television-like screen where additional editing and proofreading is done.

An interim step here involves what is called an "optical character reader." This is a machine that takes a piece of typewriter-written copy and "reads it." The story that it reads is then flashed on the TV screen. After the screen operator is satisfied that the story is ready to be set, he punches a button and the signals are relayed to a typesetting machine that spits out the story on the screen at about 400 words per minute.

But, alas, all progress has its price. In this case, it means that reporters and writers, and even editors—a breed by nature suspicious of the Brave New World of computer technology—must learn to write, and think, to some degree like a computer.

For example, as I write this column I must insert several special codes from time to time that tell the optical character reader what to do. For a $25,000 machine it is frightfully stupid, and must be led by the hand most of the way.

But the hardest thing to adjust to is the machine's insistence on near-perfect copy. This means not only must you be an almost error-free typist, but that your thoughts, word flow and sentence construction must all roll forth in clear, uncluttered prose. The machines do not take kindly to second thoughts.

This is a mind-wrenching adjustment for your obedient servant, whose usual method of composition is to hurl platoons of words at the page in hopes that a few of them will stick. Then I turn to a red pen for the mopping-up operation. James Thurber once remarked that he was not a writer, but a reviser. If nothing else, I share that quality with Thurber.

But no one likes to hear a recitation of the other guy's problems, and you are not doubt bored to tears by all this. I fully realize that our average reader couldn't care less if we were required to chip the type for each day's paper out of granite blocks, just as long as he could read it and got his delivery on time.

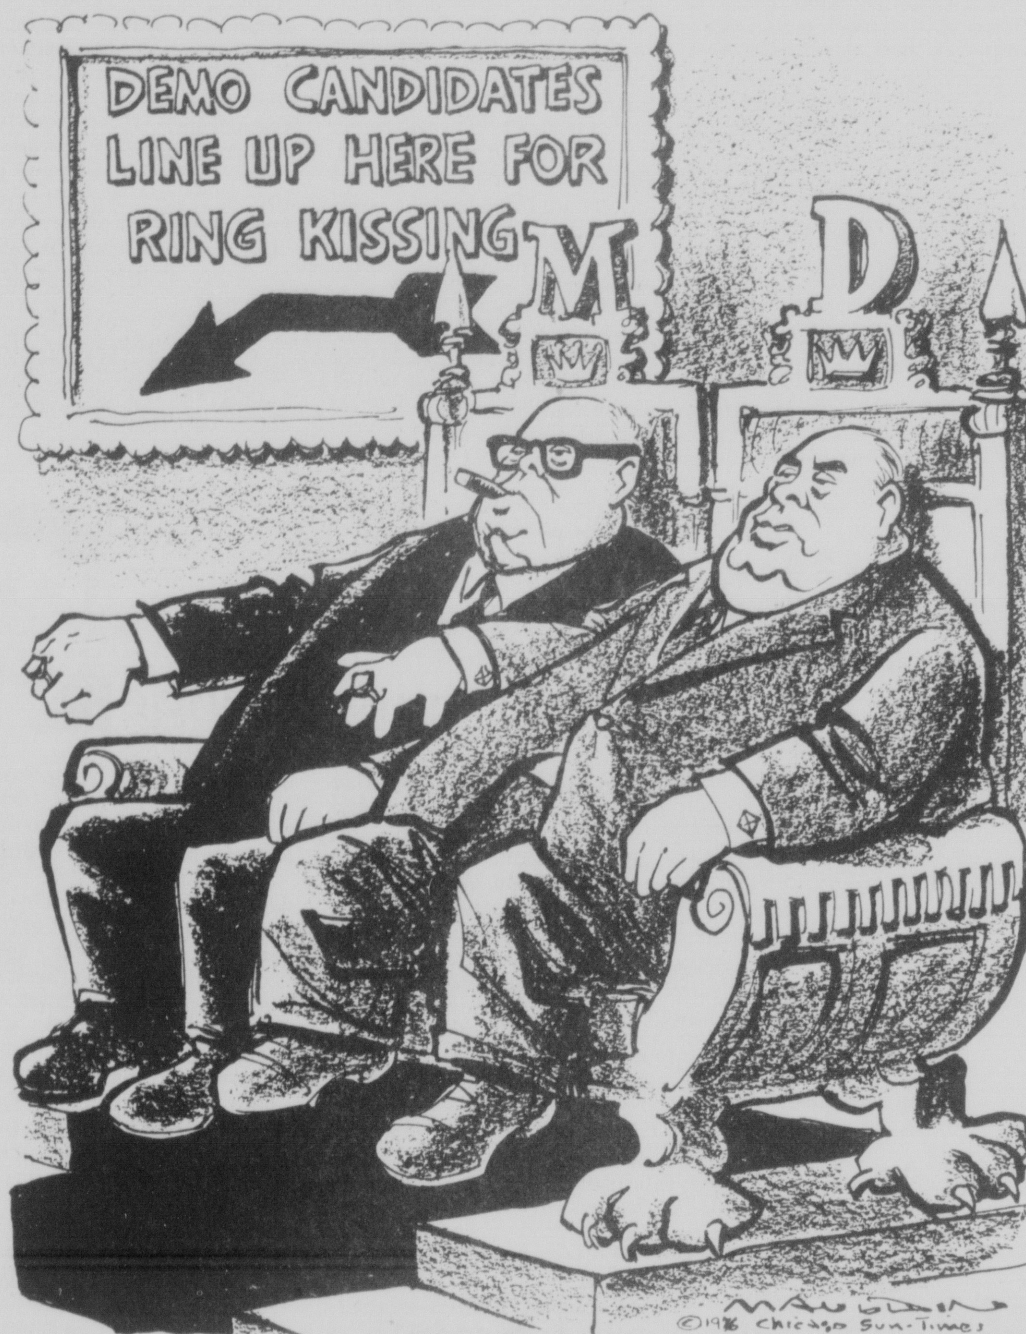

I could go on, but I think I'll stop now, since the blinking light on the machine is beckoning for my copy. I hope it won't take personal anything I've said here, but if there's a blank spot in this space today, you'll know what happened.

'Stop Reagan' talk isn't too fruitful

By JACK ANDERSON with
LES WHITTEN

WASHINGTON — In the strictest of secrecy, Republican congressional leaders huddled with President Ford a few days ago to discuss how to stop Ronald Reagan. We have obtained a copy of the secret minutes.

"Let's talk politics, real plain," House Republican leader John Rhodes began the discussion. He opposed engaging Reagan in a debate over the Panama Canal. This would be "chasing the rainbow," said Rhodes. "We ought to be stressing peace and the economy."

"We've been at fault in not pressing the affirmative issues more strongly," agreed the President.

Rhodes, a nondescript man with a rather featureless, forgettable face, also suggested pointedly that Secretary of State Henry Kissinger has become a political liability. Some of Kissinger's statements, said the Arizona conservative, hadn't been helpful.

Sen. Carl Curtis, R-Neb., a short, balding, toadish man who gave up his conservative wardrobe for bright doubleknits and natty shirts after his 1972 remarriage, disagreed about the Panama Canal.

"No issue is a phony issue which motivates the people," he contended. "I suggest we need an ambassador to go down there and argue a firm position for the United States."

"Maybe you could restructure your position on Panama," Rep. James Quillen, R-Tenn., an unreconstructed conservative, suggested to the President.

"The Panama Canal is a simplistic issue," countered Rhodes. "Why not say, 'I have no intention of giving up the right of lease and defense of the canal?'"

"The people down there are worried," insisted Curtis. "People in the U. S. are worried."

Rep. Louis Frey Jr., R-Fla., a cautious conservative, agreed with Rhodes about Kissinger. "People are not convinced that the President is running our foreign policy," said Frey.

But Sen. William Brock, R-Tenn., a handsome millionaire with dark wavy hair, a nervous grin and a few congenial wrinkles, urged the President to go on the attack against the Democratic Congress.

"Your issue is the Congress," Brock told the President.

The runtish, roosterish Sen. John Tower, R-Tex., agreed that the "anti-Washington syndrome" should be directed against Congress. "Our effort to change the composition of Congress is where the emphasis belongs," he said.

Sen. Milton Young, R-N. D., who at age 78 isn't young any more, also gave echo to this strategy. "People are mad at Congress," he said. "I'd take out (against) the Democratic Congress."

Whatever the President did, Rep. Elford Cederberg, R-Mich., cautioned him against reacting all the time to Reagan.

"The media is ready to pounce (on you)," agreed Rep. John Anderson, R-Ill., "if you seem to be devising strategies simply to woo the right."

"Reagan has seized on our problem," said Brock. "We have not seized on his." Coming back to his proposal that Ford campaign against Congress, the senator suggested this was an issue that Reagan "can't deal with" as effectively as the President can.

At the opening of the secret strategy session, Anderson called upon his colleagues to swear their political allegiance to the President.

"We haven't been fighting hard enough for you," Anderson told Ford. "If it's in order, I'd like to move a resolution that the leadership fully supports you."

Sen. Hugh Scott, the portly Senate Republican leader, playfully took the gavel away from the President. "I'll preside for a minute, if I may," said Scott. "Is there a second?"

Sen. Tower, squirming awkwardly in Vice President Nelson Rockefeller's chair, piped up: "I'll second. But will someone explain why I'm sitting in Rocky's chair?"

"All in favor?" Scott asked for a vote. It was unanimous.

Otherwise, the political powwow ended without any positive results. As Quillen asked plaintively: "Why can't we get our own fresh issues?"

CONFLICT OF INTEREST: The Food and Drug Administration has awarded a $59,000 grant to the Nutrition Today Society for developing teaching aides. The government project officer who handled the grant is Dr. Marylyn Stephenson, who happens also to be a staunch member of the society that got the grant. Moreover, one of her bosses, Dr. Allan Forbes, is listed as a director of the society.

Spokesmen for both Food and Drug Nutrition Today insist there is nothing improper about the relationship or the progress under the grant.

FUTURE KING?: Our associate Joe Spear reports from Saudi Arabia's 35-year-old Foreign Minister Saud, tall, handsome, articulate, educated at Princeton, "is being groomed for the throne."

Spear describes the young foreign minister as "impressive" with "an intimate grasp of the issues."

"Three-sided states" were those which, as colonies, had sea-to-sea charters or some claim to western land. The four-sided or nonlanded states were New Hampshire, Rhode Island, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, and Maryland. The latter strongly supported the idea that Congress should have the power to establish the boundaries of the "landed" states. This held up ratification of the Articles of Confederation. Rapist trapped by cool victim

Dear Ann Landers: I've read several letters about rape in your column, plus a lot of front-page articles. Maybe you'd be interested in something I ran across in a magazine I picked up on the bus.

It was under Neat Trick of the Month: A 15-year-old chick was raped by an 18-year-old dude. She played it cool, told him how much she dug it and gave him her phone number. She made a date with him for the next night and when they met at the appointed place, the cops grabbed him.

Excuse me if I'm wrong, but I have always been under the impression that it's impossible to rape a woman who is willing. — Just Wondering In Cassville

Dear Cass: If you are suggesting it isn't rape unless a woman screams and fights back, you're mistaken. The chick realized she was trapped in a no-win situation and decided to outsmart the rapist, which is exactly what she did.

Five will get you ten if that case was tried in court, the son-of-a-gun got off on grounds she was a willing partner. Unless a woman has two black eyes, a busted jaw and six teeth missing, the court assumes she "dug it." The way rapists go free in our country is a national disgrace.

Dear Ann Landers: I need an answer to a problem that has been bothering me for a long time. It's an in-law. Not a father-in-law or a mother-in-law, but a little kid. He's our nephew — belongs to my husband's sister.

We dread family get-togethers because of this child. He interrupts adult conversations, is mouthy, insolent and respects no one. He beats up on his cousins and some smaller kid always ends up in need of first aid.

His parents make no attempt whatever to discipline him. My husband says we should not interfere. I say if it's our house we have a right to insist on good behavior. May we have your opinion? — Headache In Holyoke

Scouts backers look for some new money

KANSAS CITY (AP) — More developments were predicted today in plans under way to save the National Hockey League franchise for Kansas City.

A spokesman for the NHL told a news conference Thursday that a $3.5-million financial package to revive the Scouts was being considered by a consortium of Kansas City bankers and investors.

League attorney Leonard Gesas, acting as an intermediary between the club and the NHL, said he was confident the Scouts would operate in Kansas City next season.

Gesas said reduced rental terms and a city-supported ticket sales campaign for the hockey team also were under consideration.

"I feel encouraged that something will be done here," Gesas said. "I can only reiterate that I feel there is not a vacuum in the situation today."

Gesas mentioned the appearance Tuesday at an NHL meeting in Chicago by David Rismiller, a Kansas City banker, as an indication of the interest-exhibited in the Scouts.

Twin setback for Royals

ARLINGTON, Tex. (AP) — So much for the Kansas City hex over the Texas Rangers.

Left-hander Joe Hoerner, a 39-year-old journeyman who was released by Kansas City in 1974, came back to haunt his former teammates Thursday night with a brilliant relief stint and suddenly the Rangers are just a half game behind the Royals in the American League Western Division.

Texas used catcher Jim Sundberg's one-out bases loaded single to defeat the Royals 5-4 in the 10th inning of a suspended game and the Rangers tripped the visitors 6-4 in the regularly scheduled second game.

Designated hitter Jim Fregosi knocked in three runs with a homer and a single in the second game and Hoerner came on strong when Ranger starter Bill Singer weakened.

"I went two and one third innings and that's the longest I've pitched since I can remember," said Hoerner. "I was really up for those guys. You always want to beat a team which releases you. I wanted to beat them bad."

Hoerner yielded just two hits as he gained his third save of the year. Singer is now 4-1.

"I'm throwing the ball better than I have in two or three years," said Hoerner. "I came to spring training without a job and (Manager) Frank Lucchesi gave me a chance. I've had to impress people every time out to make this team."

Hoerner throws with a peculiar sidearm motion because a doctor told him an Rismiller, who was not present at the news conference, declined comment on Gesas' statements, but intimated that more developments might be revealed today.

Hockey interests have until the next NHL Board of Governors meeting June 7 to come up with a workable plan to preserve the Kansas City expansion franchise which is said to have lost $5 million in its two seasons.

Dwindling attendance and finances have been blamed for the club's predicament.

Last week, the Kansas City Kings of the National Basketball Association, which share Kemper Arena with the Scouts, withdrew from negotiations to buy the hockey franchise.

Gesas said he conferred with Mayor Charles B. Wheeler Jr., and city attorneys, and felt the city might be reconsidering its position on the lease escape clause that caused the Kings to drop out.

The Kings had sought the clause in the event further financial losses made it impossible to retain the franchise locally, but the city demurred.

An organizational meeting for swimmers 18 and under and their parents has been scheduled for Tuesday at 7 p.m. in Convention Hall.

Items that will be covered at the meeting include the practice schedule, meet schedules of competition in the Central Missouri Swimming Conference, as well as transportation and suits.

In other Sedalia Park and Recreation Department news, Recreation Director Roscoe Righter announced that a meeting is set for Thursday at 7:30 p.m. at Convention Hall to determine the amount of

Chicago deals Cards 2-1 loss

CHICAGO (AP) — Pitchers Steve Renko and Darold Knowles have something in common. They know what it is. So do managers Jim Marshall of the Chicago Cubs and Red Schoendienst of the St. Louis Cardinals.

The thing the two pitchers share is effectiveness against the Cardinals and the two put their talents to work Thursday to serve the Cubs a 2-1 triumph against the Cardinals.

Renko, whom the Cubs acquired from Montreal less than two weeks ago, gained his first victory of the season but needed seventh inning help from Knowles.

The last time Renko won a major league game was last September 18 with a 5-0, five-hitter against the Cardinals for Montreal.

"There's no special reason but I seem to pitch well against the Cardinals," said the 31-year-old righthander.

"I had good control. I threw the ball where I wanted and that's a big factor."

"I'm happy to be with the Cubs," said Renko. "I'm glad to be away from Montreal. The climate there isn't the best in the world and I didn't like the tax situation (where Americans have to pay taxes to both Canada and the United States)."

Knowles, picking up his second save in two days against the Cardinals, had one victory and five saves against them last year.

"The big secret to beating the Cardinals is getting Ted Simmons and Reggie Smith out," said Knowles. "I've had good luck against those two."

Already this year Knowles has had one victory and three saves against the Cardinals.

"I know it, I know it," said Schoendienst. "Knowles can't get anybody else out but he's tough on us. I feel sorry for Pete Falcone. He's pitched great for us but we just can't get him any runs."

"Actually, the Cubs shouldn't have had a run today. They get a hit off the glove and score in the first inning and we

Sooners, Buffs dominate squad

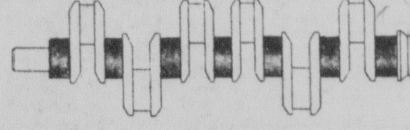

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Oklahoma and Colorado dominates the youth-oriented all-Big Eight Conference baseball team selected by the league's coaches.

The 11-player first team announced Thursday was made up of two sophomores, six juniors and three seniors. Four players from Oklahoma and three from Colorado were named to the squad. Missouri had two players on the all-star team, and Kansas and Oklahoma State had one each.

Named to the first team were catcher Mark Thiel, Missouri; first baseman Kelly Snider, Oklahoma; second baseman Keith Drumright, Oklahoma; shortstop Greg Cypret, Missouri; third baseman Kevin Kirk, Colorado; outfielders Terry Bogener, Oklahoma, Rick Magee,

Guthrie qualifies for World 600

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — "I think she realizes now that I'm not bulling her," engine-builder Ralph Moody said Thursday after Janet Guthrie became the first woman to qualify for a major stock car race.

Miss Guthrie, foiled in her recent attempts to make the Indianapolis 500 field, averaged 152.797 miles an hour in the former Chevrolet of A.J. Foyt to land the 27th, starting position for Sunday's 17th annual World 600 at Charlotte Motor Speedway.

"She has proven she can drive a Grand National car and that will help her confidence," said Moody, who built Miss Guthrie's engine. He was half of the former Holman-Moody team whose cars dominated the sport for so many years. "She will get faster and be able to tell us more about the car's handling as she gets experience."

Miss Guthrie, a 33-year-old physicist from New York City, helped bump the likes of veterans Buck Baker, Bobby Isaac and David Sisco from the field. Her two-lap qualifying sprint around the 1.5-mile super s; ay was the 12th quickest of the day as 15 drivers made the 40-car field and 18 others were left to vie for 10 spots Friday.

"Don't ask me about that woman driver," quipped Baker, who at age 57 is attempting to make a comeback. "She has already made a fool out of me with my prediction (of 145 m.p.h.). She's in the field and I'm not. I'm ready to believe anything. Even that she can win the race." Baker, who said Miss Guthrie wouldn't make the field, averaged 151.281 in a Chevrolet, about a mile and a half slower than her.

"I wouldn't say that I felt nervous today," Miss Guthrie said. "There's a word that fits the situation better. I call it butterflies."

Informed that her speed was about six miles slower than David Pearson, who took the No. 1 starting spot with a speed of 159.132, she said. "There's six more miles in the car. But I'm not sure there is six more miles left in my driving this weekend."

She said she probably will use a relief driver in the grueling 600-mile race, but didn't know who. "That decision will be up to the car owner."

Benny Parsons, Grand National point leader and winner of the Mason-Dixon 500 two weeks ago, led Thursday's 15 second-day qualifiers with a speed of 155.538. His Chevrolet was some four miles slower than Pearson's pole-winning speed and 12th over-all.

Celtics take 2-0 edge to Phoenix

BOSTON (AP) — Boston's pro basketball fans are used to watching the Celtics destroy opposing teams with one explosive period. But rarely have they witnessed anything like what they saw in the second game of the 1976 National Basketball Association championship series.

With a capacity crowd of 15,320 screaming loudly Thursday night, the Celtics combined near-perfect offense and defense for the first five minutes of the third period, outscoring the jittery Phoenix Suns 20-2. After that, the Celtics had to put down only one belated Phoenix rally before registering a 105-90 victory and assuming a 2-0 lead in the nationally televised best-of-seven series.

"The crowd really got psyched," Phoenix' rookie center Alvan Adams said afterwards.

What really set the crowd afire was a deliberate foul called against former Celtics' backcourt man Paul Westphal with Boston leading 51-41 early in the third quarter.

Westphal was called for the rare infraction when he grabbed Boston's Jo Jo White from behind as the Celtics' guard headed for what appeared to be an easy layup after he had stolen the ball from his ex-teammate.

"When they saw their beloved Paul (until then still a favorite of the Boston fans even one year after his trade to Phoenix) do something they didn't like ... it got the crowd rockin', it got the Celtics rockin', too," said Adams.

Phoenix Coach John MacLeod protested the call against Westphal and was tagged with a technical foul.

White, although infuriated, sank all three free throw attempts and the Celtics were winging.

White's steal had been preceded by a theft and an easy layup by Charlie Scott, and those two plays unglued the young, inexperienced Suns, who have not beaten the Celtics in 12 games on Boston's home court in five years.

After White's three foul shots, Scott and John Havlicek hit long jump shots, giving the Celtics 12 consecutive points in the first three minutes of the period and a 58-41 lead. Adams broke the string with a tipin, but Boston came right back with eight points in a row and it was 66-43.

Later in the period, the lead had ballooned to 80-52. The Suns, after shooting a poor 33 per cent from the floor through the first three periods, finally

Fast-pitch tournament opens tonight

A pair of games tonight in Centennial Park kick off the fourth-annual Sedalia Stags Invitational Softball Tournament.

The host Stags, who have won the last two tournaments, will face Clarksburg in the first game at 7 p.m. on the south field.

The 8:30 p.m. game pits Pilot Grove against Whiteman Air Force Base. That contest is also on the south field in Centennial Park.

The balance of the first-round action in the double-elimination tourney will be played Saturday. At noon, Marshall faces Cole Camp and Cooper County takes on Sedalia ADCO at 1:30 p.m. All first-round games will be played on the south field.

The tournament will conclude Sunday evening.

Winnipeg sweeps Aeros

WINNIPEG (AP) — The Winnipeg Jets gained their first ever World Hockey Association championship Thursday night with a humiliating 9-1 victory over the defending champion Houston Aeros.

The Jets outscored Houston 3-1 in the first period, 4-0 in the second and 2-0 in the third to win their fourth consecutive game and sweep the best-of-seven World Cup final.

The capacity crowd of 10,386, the largest in Winnipeg this season, gave the Jets a thunderous welcome when they skated onto the ice to begin the game and seldom let up their cheers after the championship trophy had been presented and the team retired to the dressing room.

"I never would have believed it," Houston Coach Bill Dineen said. "I have never seen my club more ready than it was tonight. I wouldn't have believed we could have been blown out like that."

The Jets came out flying and if not for the outstanding goaltending of Ron Grahame, they would have built up a larger lead in the first period.

Anders Hedberg, Veli Ketola and Peter Sullivan scored two goals each for Winnipeg with Bobby Hull, Lyle Moffat and Bobby Guindon adding solo goals. Ted Taylor collected Houston's only goal to give the Aeros a short-lived tie midway through the first period.

"That was the best game any team's played against us all season," Dineen said in the subdued Aeros' dressing room. "Those guys could have played the Montreal Canadiens tonight and beat them."

22 guys. They worked hard all season but when the playoffs came around, they become a very hungry hockey team."

"Every game we play we play it the same way," speedy Anders Hedberg, a two-goal scorer in the third game Tuesday, said. "We go all out all the way, no matter what the score."

Hedberg also summed up the feelings of most of the Jets when he said the championship helped to prove that Winnipeg's non-aggressive style of play can beat rough, aggressive teams.

"That's the important thing," he said. "We proved that our style of play, with fast skating, fine passing and a high level of skill, can win in the end."

Houston took eight of 13 minor penalties and the Jets took advantage to score twice on power plays.

The only negative factor in the victory for the Jets was the injury to center Ulf Nilsson, the playoff's leading scorer with 26 points, including a record 19 assists. Nilsson was voted the most valuable player in the playoffs.

He was hit in the eye by a stick late in the second period and was taken to hospital for overnight observation.

Three tilts set tonight in tourney

Tonight's opening game at 6:30 p.m. in the Harmony Baptist Softball League's Pre-season tourney at Housel Park pits Emmet Ave. against First Sedalia Baptist No. 2 in a losers' bracket game.

At 8 p.m., First Sedalia No. 1 goes against East Sedalia Baptist. The night's finale at 9:30 p.m. features Knob Noster and Nazarene. The 8 p.m. and 9:30 p.m. games are winners' bracket contests.

Three more games will be played Saturday night in the double-elimination tournament, which is scheduled to end June 5.

Foyt is rated slight favorite

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — A.J. Foyt, the seemingly ageless speedster who has been looking for nearly a decade for a record fourth victory here, gets the nod as a slight favorite over a quartet of other former winners for victory in Sunday's 60th annual Indianapolis 500.

The fifth annual Associated Press poll of drivers, mechanics, officials and newsmen rated Foyt a 4-1 favorite with 5-1 odds on pole position starter Johnny Rutherford, Gordon Johncock, Al Unser and Mario Andretti.

Defending champion Bobby Unser, with a new team this year, was listed at no better than 11-1.

The 42-year-old Foyt, who has had more than his share of troubles this month, reportedly has solved the problems that resulted in his qualifying a relatively poor fifth in the 33-car lineup.

If there is a dark horse in the field, it figures to be veteran Roger McCluskey, the 1973 national champion, who has been here 15 times now, led the race twice but never come away better than third.

McCluskey is driving a new machine designed by the fellow who laid out the specifications for Dan Gurney's fabulously successful Eagle a few years ago, and this new machine appears to be the best of the lot. McCluskey is starting in the fifth row, but his qualifying speed is sixth fastest over-all.

At 6-1: Wally Dallenbach, the hard luck loser of last year should be as tough as ever with a little better fortune. McCluskey, if you're a betting person, watch this one — this very well could be his year.

At 7-1: Tom Sneva, only a relative lack of experience keeps him from being rated better this year.

At 8-1: Lloyd Ruby, after what he and his team did in just three days to get him in the show, you have to give him a good shot at it.

At 11-1: Pancho Carter, still a little inexperienced like Sneva, but driving a car that is a proven winner. Bill Vukovich, the driver is very capable if the car can finish. Mike Mosley, the perennial dark horse, with an even more intense desire to win this year.

At 10-1: Gary Bettenhausen, a very good journeyman race driver who could win with the right breaks.

At 11-1: Bobby Unser, no question about the driver, but the team has trouble keeping engines together lately.

The remaining drivers in the field were rated at 15-1 or worse.

The AP poll accurately picked Mark Donohue in 1972 and Johncock in 1973. Rutherford, who won in 1974, was a co-favorite that year with Foyt, as was Bobby Unser last year.

Here's the line on the other drivers queuing behind Foyt:

At 5-1: Rutherford, a proven driver, proven car, proven team — what more could you ask? Johncock should have no shortage of horsepower with the new George Bignotti engine. Watch out for Al Unser if his Cosworth-powered machine is running at the finish. Andretti, he won't be 19th very long.

Kirkpatrick scores ace

Dr. Chester Kirkpatrick, Route 3, carded the first hole-in-one of the season at Walnut Hills Country Club Thursday afternoon, when he aced the 156-yard, par-three seventh hole.

Witnesses to the shot were his sons, Don and Glen Kirkpatrick.

Oil firm break-up would hurt

The break-up of the major oil companies would create "chaos" in the industry, increase prices for consumers and make the United States more dependent on foreign oil, Kiwanians were told Thursday.

Bob Debo, associate director of the Missouri Oil Council, addressed the club at its luncheon meeting at the Bothwell Hotel. He said divestiture efforts currently underway in Congress are part of an attack on the "whole system of private, competitive enterprise."

Debo said the nation currently imports 40 per cent of its oil requirements, more than during the oil embargo of two years ago. He also criticized Congress for not developing an energy policy that recognizes the fact that domestic production must be encouraged.

The Rev. Marvin Albright introduced the program.

Secretary Lindsay Edwards announced that Doug Kneibert, immediate past Kiwanis president, was among 72 presidents in Missouri and Arkansas cited for distinguished service. There are 200 clubs in the two-state district.

Brig Harry Ossmo of the Salvation Army was a guest of Capt. Robert Quinn. Ossmo is territorial evangelist for the Salvation Army.

Macmillan in hospital

LONDON (AP) — Former Prime Minister Harold Macmillan has been admitted to London's King Edward VII Hospital with a bloodstream infection.

An aide disclosed Thursday that Macmillan, 82, prime minister from January 1957 to October 1963, entered the hospital on Wednesday. He said the former prime minister is expected to be bedridden for several weeks.

"His condition is not too bad," a statement said. "He has been unwell recently, but this hospital stay was not a planned one."

Prince Philip's art in museum

LONDON (AP) — The husband of Queen Elizabeth II has proven he is a talented weekend artist. Four of his oils are hanging in the prestigious Royal Academy of Art.

Prince Philip's paintings went on show Thursday, all of them undated and unsigned. But a discreet notice named the artist.

Two pictures show royal castles, and the other two show a steel mill in India and Fishermen's huts in Malaysia.

The prince was invited to show his paintings by Sir Hugh Casson, president of the Royal Academy.

"I am sure it would never have occurred to the prince to exhibit the paintings himself," said a secretary at Buckingham Palace.

Potatoes produce some 4.8 million calories an acre, or about five times as many as rice and 10 times as many as wheat, the National Geographic Society says.

After the operation

Keri Ann Miller is held by her mother, Mary, as her father, Christopher, holds her doll during a question and answer session. Keri Ann, 3, born with a severe and extremely rare deformity known as Hallerman-Streiff syndrome, underwent surgery at Children's Hospital in Philadelphia a week ago. The surgery repaired serious facial deformities, including moving her eyes farther apart.

Little girl undergoes surgery for deformity

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Keri Ann Miller grinned and giggled Thursday as she hugged the big doll with the funny black glasses, unmindful that a week ago she underwent rare surgery that repaired serious facial deformities, including moving her eyes farther apart.

Wearing a bright red bathrobe, the 3-year-old girl from Omaha, Neb., played with the doll while her mother and father talked to reporters at Children's Hospital.

"She's not going through any pain at all," said Mary Miller. "Keri Ann's running around the hospital like it's a big playground."

A two-inch bandage covered the top of Keri Ann's head from ear to ear and her face was still swollen and disfigured. Doctors who participated in the six-hour operation said it would be months before they're sure it is a success.

Keri Ann was born with an extremely rare deformity known as Hallerman-Streiff syndrome. Her eyes were so close together there wasn't enough room for a normal nose. There was insufficient bone in the eyebrow area but an access above them that created an overhanging forehead.

"The defects appear to be corrected," said Dr. Linton A. Whitaker, senior surgeon at Children's Facial Reconstruction Center which has corrected deformities in 78 youngsters since 1972.

"Certainly her looks will be changed, and I'm sure greatly improved. She may need some minor revisions. And she is going to need surgery to correct congenital cataracts in her eyes, which will give her better vision."

"If she can tolerate the surgery it will be done in about two weeks. I'd say she'll be home in Omaha before the end of June."

Mrs. Miller, 22, who also has a 5-year-old daughter, said Keri Ann is "happy as ever (and) doesn't really realize what's going on. She never knew she was different."

She said that when Keri Ann came to the hospital, "nurses bandaged a doll's head to show her what it would be like when she woke up. She thought it was neat."

Expenses for the $8,000 operation were borne by Variety Club International.

Dr. Louis Shute, chief neurosurgeon at the hospital said the child's skull had to be opened from the top so the brain could be moved upwards from the eye sockets.

"This was very difficult," he said. "Neurosurgery also was involved in the reshaping of the skull."

In an operation in New York City last week, surgeons reshaped a 15-year-old girl's face and moved her eyes closer together. Ida Hays of La Grande, Ore., was born with her eyes set twice as far apart as normal.

DEA director blasts legalizing marijuana

KANSAS CITY, Kan. (AP) — A "gross absurdity," was the way the regional director of the Drug Enforcement Administration terms the possibility of the legalization of marijuana.

"People are out of their cotton-picking trees if they think that legalizing marijuana will take the thrill or demand out of it," William Clark told the Kansas Governor's Conference on Drug Abuse Prevention Thursday.

Efforts to reduce the penalty for marijuana users are initial steps to legalization and a cheap way out of drug abuse, he said.

If there is an answer to the drug problem, Clark said, it is the elimination of demand.

"If you're going to put a significant violator away, you have to get to the source," he said.

"Why not run the demand out of town?"

Legalizing marijuana also would fail to change society's attitudes toward abuse, he contended.

"You better realize that every major cigarette company has patents prepared to market the sale of marijuana cigarettes as soon as the weed is legal," Clark said.

Appeals court clears way for investigation

AVA, Mo. (AP) — A state Court of Appeals ruling cleared the way for a Douglas County grand jury inquiry scheduled today in the death of a teenager shot by an Ava policeman.

The three-judge court, sitting in Springfield, denied a motion Thursday by Prosecutor Harry R. Stafford Jr., of Douglas County that he be allowed to direct the grand jury investigation.

Stafford sought to have set aside the appointment by Judge James C. Crouch of the Douglas County Circuit Court of a special prosecutor, A. F. Turner of Mountain Grove.

He also asked the appeals court to prohibit from limiting the scope of the investigation, also denied. The grand jury is the first one to be summoned in Douglas County since 1951.

Judge Crouch explained that he replaced Stafford with a special prosecutor because Stafford had already conducted two inquiries into the shooting of Edward Paul, 17, of Independence, Mo., last month.

Paul was shot by Marvin Naugle, an Ava police officer, who was chasing three youths who ran after their car collided with his patrol car. He said he fired two warning shots. The second shot struck Paul.

Jury acquits man of murder charges

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Reginald Darris, 25, has been acquitted of three first-degree murder charges in connection with the shooting deaths of three persons during a January 1975 robbery.

Darris was found innocent of the charges Thursday, following a four-day trial in St. Louis Circuit Court.

The defendant had been charged with killing Mrs. Emma Ervin, 49; Mrs. Ulra Richardson, 71, and James Casson, 29, during a robbery at the Ervin home.

An earlier trial of Darris had resulted in a mistrial.

Phone-wire radiation discovered in Moscow

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. ambassador in Moscow, Walter J. Stoessel Jr., has been exposed to radiation carried into his Embassy office over his own telephone line, according to a State Department source.

The phone-wire radiation was discovered several weeks ago, the source said, by a team of Central Intelligence Agency technical specialists dispatched to Moscow to investigate microwaves apparently being beamed at the Embassy by the Soviets.

The CIA's tests showed radiation considerably higher than indicated by earlier tests by the State Department's bureau of security, the source said.

CIA personnel operate much of the Embassy's highly sophisticated communications equipment, housed in upper floors of the 10-story structure. Those same floors — which also contain the offices for Stoessel and other top U.S. diplomats — have been the main target of the searchlight-like microwave beams.

The reason for the Soviet microwaves remains unclear. It also was unclear why Stoessel's telephone line was conducting radiation. There was, however, some suggestion that the radiation found on the telephone line was an unintended byproduct of the microwaves.

The microwaves aimed at the building are suspected of being used either to foil reputed U.S. electronic eavesdropping devices or to allow the Soviets somehow to eavesdrop on the Embassy.

The situation has sparked concern over possible effects of the radiation on health or behavior of U.S. embassy officers.

Since early February, aluminum screening has been installed on the Embassy's windows to help block out the radiation.

However, even after the screening was installed, the CIA found that Stoessel's outside telephone wire was "bringing the radiation right into his office on that line because of the exposure — the way the line is hooked up," the State Department source said.

The source noted that "these new tests that were made, with new equipment, picked it up where nobody had picked it up before."

Earlier tests had failed to detect the phone-line radiation, he said, because State Department personnel used "faulty equipment."

The CIA testing team also detected radiation being conducted into the ambassador's office along wires connected to an overhead light, according to the source, who requested that he not be identified.

The source said that when Stoessel was informed of the new radiation tests, the ambassador was "beside himself" and expressed his concern in classified cables to Lawrence K. Eagleburger, deputy undersecretary of state for management.

In recent weeks, electronic specialists have taken steps to try to minimize radiation from the telephone line and overhead light wires, the source reported.

Troopers, law officers defendants in lawsuit

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A $200,000 damage suit has been filed by James E. Flowers and Bernie D. Flowers against six Missouri state troopers and the sheriffs and deputies of New Madrid and Pemiscot counties.

The petition, filed April 12 on their own behalf, alleges that following their arrest July 13, 1975 for a robbery in Caruthersville, they were beaten at the Portageville city jail and later at the New Madrid County jail.

The suit also charges that they were denied counsel during questioning and denied phone calls as well as clean clothes, bedding and shower facilities.

U.S. District Judge H. Kenneth Wanglin has ordered the Flowers brothers to make their complaint more definite in response to a request by the Missouri Attorney General.

James Flowers is serving a 20-year sentence at the Missouri State Penitentiary for felonious assault. His brother is serving four years.
